The theme for the Egypt UNDAF 2013-2017, “Achieving MDGs+ with Inclusive Growth, Freedom, Social Justice and Dignity,” conveys the over-arching aim of this UNDAF, which is to support Egypt’s accelerated progress on the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) and go beyond the MDGs. It also aims to advance on other important objectives consistent with the United Nations Millennium Declaration signed by over 150 countries, including Egypt at the UN Summit in 2000. It also reflects the emphasis that will be placed on reducing gender, socio-economic and geographical disparities, and on addressing the special needs of vulnerable groups. Lastly, it aims to puts the emphasis on the restoration of a new social contract between the State and the citizens, building confidence in sound and transparent law enforcement institutions. In this way, the development programmes carried out under this UNDAF will contribute to inclusive development and a more equitable society that translates into positive impacts on people’s lives.

Executive Summary

The UNDAF was prepared throughout 2010, based on the '2010 Situation Analysis: Key Development Challenges Facing Egypt' which remains valid to a great extent. A first draft of the UNDAF was finalized in the beginning of 2011. The revolution of 2011 led to a postponement of the signature of the UNDAF to ensure that emerging issues, opportunities and priorities were reflected in the future work of the UN in Egypt. Therefore, in 2011 and 2012, the UN in close collaboration with the Government of Egypt and its national and international development partners reviewed the draft UNDAF ensuring the integration of these priorities. The UNCT and Government have agreed on the following UNDAF priority areas:

- Poverty Alleviation through Pro-Poor Growth and Equity;
- Quality Basic Services;
- Democratic Governance;
- Food Security and Nutrition; and
- Environmental Sustainability and Natural Resource Management.

A total of 24 UNDAF outcomes indicate the specific results expected in terms of institutional performance or human behaviour for individual and social change. Gender mainstreaming, as a cross sectoral responsibility, is the overarching strategy of the UNCT for making women's and men's concerns an integral dimension of the design, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of policies and programmes in all UNDAF priority areas so that women and men benefit equally and inequality is not perpetuated. Each outcome is accompanied by a limited number of performance indicators to guide programme design and facilitate monitoring and evaluation after implementation.

UNDAF implementation and coordination arrangements will be carried out by teams with clearly outlined responsibilities. An UNDAF Steering Committee will provide overall guidance for UNDAF implementation, meeting once a year on the basis of an annual report. The UNCT will be responsible for the management of the UNDAF, overseeing the work of the UNDAF Priority Working Groups (PWGs), reviewing an annual work plan and the annual report. The PWGs will prepare the annual work plan and results-oriented annual report, and keep abreast of developments within their work areas. They will be supported by the M&E Taskforce which provides technical advice to the PWGs and UNCT in monitoring and reporting on UNDAF outcomes and results, and building on national M&E systems and mechanisms.

The UNDAF will be systematically monitored on basis of the UNDAF Results Matrix that consists of a set of performance indicators for each outcome with corresponding baselines, targets and means of verification. To the extent possible, the monitoring data will come from national M&E systems and data repositories to ensure alignment with national M&E processes, reduce transaction costs, and enhance national ownership and mutual accountability.

A final evaluation of the UNDAF will be undertaken in the first quarter of 2017, and a Mid-Term Review is projected to take place towards the beginning of 2015. These exercises will assess the relevance, efficiency, effectiveness and sustainability of the UN system's technical and development assistance to Egypt, and the collective UN system's contributions to national priorities. They will identify key achievements, lessons learned, best practices which will be factored into the design of the next UNDAF.

The UNDAF foresees a total budget of 736 million US dollar for the period of the UNDAF. While considerable efforts will be required by Government and the UN to mobilize funds to carry out activities in line with UNDAF outcomes, this budget figure is realistic as it is in line with expenditures reported by UN agencies in Egypt for 2010.

Signature Page

The United Nations in Egypt supports Egypt's transition to greater democracy and is committed to improve the quality of life for all women, men, boys and girls living in Egypt by developing national capacity and building strong partnerships with the Government, civil society, the private sector, academia, think tanks, media and other national and international development partners. Using international best practices, the UN advocates for change, provides evidence-based policy advice and direct support to promote human rights, justice, equity and prosperity within a sustainable and clean environment.

During 2013 – 2017, the United Nations will focus its development cooperation on five priorities as outlined in this United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF), which has been prepared by the United Nations in close consultation with the Government of Egypt and its national and international development partners. These priorities are:

- Poverty Alleviation through Pro-Poor Growth and Equity;
- Quality Basic Services;
- Democratic Governance
- Food Security and Nutrition;
- Environmental Sustainability and Natural Resource Management.

By signing hereunder, the participating parties endorse this UNDAF and underscore their joint commitment to the fulfilment of its goals.

The World Bank will support the UNDAF Priority Areas coherent with the World Bank's Interim Strategy Note as agreed with the Government of Egypt and will deploy all efforts to ensure aid coordination and development effectiveness.

Hartwig Schafer, Director,
World Bank (Egypt, Yemen, Djibouti)

The United Nations Development Action Framework (UNDAF) represents a common strategic framework for the operational activities of the United Nations system at the country level, describing the collective, coherent and integrated UN actions and strategies to the achievement of the national development priorities. The achievement of the UNDAF Outcomes, described below, is a joint effort of the Government of Egypt and the UN.

This UNDAF covers the programming cycle from 1 July 2013 to 31 December 2017. This is third UNDAF showing the long standing cooperation relationship between the Government of Egypt and UN. The first UNDAF covered 2002-2006. The second UNDAF covered 2007 – 2011 and was extended to July 2013.

Section 1 – Introduction

This section provides an overview of the development setting in Egypt, the UN's comparative advantage and capacities, the UNDAF preparation process, and programme directions and priorities of the UNDAF. The UNDAF was prepared throughout 2010, based on the '2010 Situation Analysis: Key Development Challenges Facing Egypt' which remains valid to a great extent. A first draft of the UNDAF was finalized in the beginning of 2011. The revolution of 2011 led to a postponement of the signature of the UNDAF to ensure that emerging issues, opportunities and priorities were reflected in the future work of the UN in Egypt. Therefore, in 2011 and 2012, the UN in close collaboration with the Government of Egypt and its national and international development partners reviewed and updated the draft UNDAF ensuring the integration of these priorities.

Overview of the Development Setting in Egypt

For the first time in its history, the Arab Republic of Egypt is governed, since 1 July 2012, by a democratically elected civilian president. This important achievement comes as a result of prolonged struggle for democracy that was at its highest intensity during the period from January 25 to February 11 2011 when determined activists took to the streets of Cairo and other major cities. The 2011 revolution was fuelled by a widespread sense of political, economic and social exclusion (especially among youth).

Nevertheless, Egypt has seen progress in its development agenda in recent decades. To highlight a few examples: average per capita income has increased significantly, child and maternal mortality have dropped considerably, and the coverage of basic utilities— such as safe drinking water and electricity – now reaches a high percentage of the population. Within the framework of South-South Cooperation (SSC), Egypt is also increasingly becoming a development provider. At the same time, it is widely recognized that further progress is required on the country's human development and human rights' agenda. Challenges include ensuring that economic growth translates into improved equity and poverty reduction; generating decent work opportunities, especially for youth and women; improving the quality of essential services (including health and education); accelerating progress on gender equality and women's empowerment , political participation, transparency and public accountability; addressing the country's high population growth rate; reducing pressure on natural resources; advancing on persistent health challenges such as Hepatitis C, HIV/AIDS, TB and non-communicable diseases; upgrading the performance of institutions; strengthening accountability, respect for human rights and combating corruption.

Due to the political and social unrest which followed the revolution, Egypt's economy has suffered considerably since 2011 resulting in a drastic impact on the tourism sector, a decrease in foreign investments and shrinking of foreign reserves. This impact on the economy has aggravated the already existing imbalances and resulted in for example higher unemployment, especially amongst the young generation which together with the low participation of women in the labour market remains a major concern. In chapter 2a more detailed analysis is provided for each of the five priority areas.

Tracking progress towards the MDGs

The MDGs provide a good overview on the main development challenges of Egypt. Tracking Egypt's progress in achieving the MDGs was systematically carried out, through the preparation of national reports that were published in 2002, 2004, 2005, 2008 and 2010. These reports portray Egypt's progress in achieving each of the MDGs and their trend since 2000 and highlighted as well factors boosting and/or inhibiting progress. These reports helped provide guidance concerning the process of identifying priorities as well as future actions to ensure the achievement of the MDGs within target date.

The 2010 MDG's report indicates that Egypt remains on track to achieve most of the MDGs, but also highlights the significant gaps in income levels and living standards between different parts of Egypt and across the different segments of Egyptian society. The MDG report highlights that the most critical areas of deficit are poverty and hunger, unemployment, gender disparities, and access to improved sanitation facilities. It argues that Egypt's most challenging task over the next five years is to reduce the incidence of those living below the national poverty line<sup>1</sup>. Unemployment is a critical challenge, especially amongst youth under the age of 30. Intensified efforts are needed to reach full and productive employment and gender equality in the area of female employment and access to labour markets.

With regards to gender disparities, despite reducing the gap in basic education enrolment, women's representation in political life continues to be low. Women are lagging considerably behind on issues pertaining to education, economic empowerment and political participation. Moreover, as noted above, female participation in the labour force has declined in the last few years, largely due to poor working conditions in the private sector including low wages, long working hours and poor transport systems. Sexual harassment and sexual assault continue to be major issues in Egypt's society.

Hepatitis B and C represents major health hazards and is considered among the leading causes of morbidity and mortality in various parts of the country. HIV/AIDS rates are low, but there is a concentrated epidemic and rates are rising.

With regards to education, it is expected that Egypt will timely achieve universal primary education, for both genders, and would successfully reduce the illiteracy rate. The quality of education in Egypt still remains a challenge that needs to be addressed as well as expanding access to out of school children.

Child mortality and maternal mortality have witnessed considerable improvements and Egypt has already achieved the target for infant mortality and child mortality before 2015. Moreover, there has been a significant reduction in maternal mortality and although it is expected to reach the goal by 2015, some independent estimates are indicating that Egypt had already reached MDG 5 (The Lancet, April 2010).

<sup>1</sup> The incidence of poverty is the percentage of the population that lives below the poverty line. The food poverty line for the extremely poor is constructed by using the cost of a food bundle that is consistent with consumption of poor households and reaches minimum calorie requirements. The MDG target of eradicating extreme poverty at US$1 has been adjusted to US$1.25 to allow for inflation. The national poverty line is constructed by augmenting the food poverty line with an allowance for expenditure on essential non-food goods. In Egypt in 2008, a person who spent less than LE 1,648 per year is considered extremely poor and one that spent less than LE 2,223 is poor (lower poverty line). The upper poverty line is LE 2,801 per capita per year, with a slightly higher allowance for non-food goods. The extreme poverty measure is very close to US$1.25 per day (MDG 1), whereas the upper poverty measure is very close to US$2.5 per day. The equivalence is calculated at a purchasing power parity (ppp) exchange rate of US$1=LE3.1 for 2008/2009.

Egypt also witnessed significant development in the last few years in the field of information and communication technology. The number of fixed line subscribers reached 13.28 per 100 inhabitants in November 2009 (declined to 9% in 2011), and the number of cell phone subscribers has risen to 70.06 per hundred people during the same reference period and to 81 by 2011. The number of Internet users has increased to reach 18.86% in 2009 (27.8 million or 34.3% in 2011).

The above points to the success of Egypt in reaching the MDGs. At the same time, challenges such as the wide ranging disparities that exist between the various parts of the country, especially Upper Egypt and rural areas, gender disparities, continued high levels of population growth and the need to achieve high and sustainable economic growth to reach levels that exceeds those observed before the successive global crises. Special attention will need to be given to enhance both youth and women opportunities and expand their level of participation, and the quality of various national data systems need to be enhanced to provide regular quality evidences and sex disaggregated data about the level of progress.

Egypt also faces a new set of development challenges that have emerged in recent years. These include: the negative impact of climate change and the associated risks this represents to large populations residing in vulnerable regions of the country (including the economically important and highly-populated Delta region); endemic Avian Human Influenza and its negative impact on livelihoods, especially amongst rural women; and increasing incidences of poverty, such as rising child malnutrition.

Even though Egypt has attained lower Middle-Income Country (MIC) status it continues to face a wide array of development challenges that should compel development partners, including the UN, to remain engaged in supporting national efforts that address these issues and, more broadly, to make advances on its human development agenda. It is however important to embrace strategies that empower people both in the area of democratic governance and on economic and social issues, to benefit the most vulnerable and marginalized and to increase linkages between development initiatives and the norms and standards of international human rights law. In addition, there is a need to use development cooperation more effectively and efficiently, in line with Paris, Accra and Busan principles on aid/development effectiveness.

UN Comparative Advantage and Capacities in Egypt

A prominent comparative advantage of the UN is that the UN upholds the norms, standards and principles of the UN Charter, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and statutory and customary international law and international treaties as well as the Millennium Declaration. The UN is the custodian of these instruments, advocates for their implementation, monitors adherence, and supports Governments in complying with their obligations. The UN stands for a principled, norm-based, constructive engagement. The following principles, amongst others, are fundamental to UN engagement: a human rights based approach, dignity, growth with equity, inclusiveness, accountability, transparency, anti-corruption and a focus on results.

The work of the UN in Egypt and the programme areas identified in this UNDAF have been shaped by the confidence that national partners have in the UN to respond quickly, flexibly and effectively to both on-going and emerging needs, and to operate in harmony with other stakeholders while remaining neutral and impartial. These advantages have been reinforced by the long-term presence of the UN in the country.

The UN in Egypt has supported national partners to undertake important normative and analytical work on priority development issues, the value of which is recognized by the Government and other development partners. This includes supporting the preparation of ten national human development reports, periodic reports on the status of children, periodic reports on status of women; the state of population report, the report 'Situation Analysis: Key Development Challenges facing Egypt'; as well as studies on child poverty, human trafficking, food security and nutrition, etc. In addition to strengthening national capacities at the individual and institutional levels, these studies have enriched the development debate in Egypt, informed public policies, provided evidence for programming, and resulted in important allocations of national and international resources. Likewise, UN support to poverty mapping at the national and governorate levels has guided the design, implementation, and monitoring of poverty programmes.

In order to address effectively key development challenges in Egypt, the UN will continue to work closely with Government, both at the central level and with increasing emphasis at the governorate level. At the same time, to ensure broad national ownership and sustainability of results, the UN is developing a more substantive partnership for dialogue and consultation with a wide variety of relevant national development partners from the public and non-public sectors (including the Parliament, civil society organisations, youth-led groups and associations, the private sector, foundations, academia, and the media), as well as Egypt's international development partners (bilateral, multilateral and foundations), both from the North and the South. This expanded engagement builds on the UN's demonstrated capacity to facilitate the participation of a wide array of national and international actors including through existing initiatives, such as the Development Partners' Group (which brings together 20 bilateral<sup>2</sup> and 19 multilateral organisations); multi-stakeholder platforms, such as the Food Security and Nutrition Policy Advisory Board; and strategic joint programmes on multi-sectoral issues, such as climate change, human trafficking, etc.

As in other middle income countries, the UN is expected to work less on direct programme implementation and increase its work in the areas of upstream policy advice, advocacy, and capacity development, drawing on its strong and varied country presence, healthy mix of international managers and highly-capable national professionals with local knowledge that is backed by regional and international expertise. Facilitating access to the UN's worldwide experience and knowledge is an important asset the UN brings to bear, as well as supporting Egypt in South-South Cooperation (SSC) – both in terms of brokering incoming SSC to address domestic needs and helping Egypt to expand its role as a provider of development services to other countries.

The UN will continue to undertake and promote the use of analytical work on priority development issues to enrich the development debate in Egypt, inform public policies, provide evidence for programming and policy making, and guide allocations of national and international resources.

The UN in Egypt has demonstrated a strong capacity to mobilize and facilitate interaction with national and international actors. Indeed, the role of the UN in supporting national development actors to bring together a wide variety of development partners from the public and non-public sectors (including NGOs, CSOs, the private sector, foundations, and academia) to engage on complex development issues has been highlighted as being particularly important, as exemplified by several on-going UN supported initiatives.

<sup>2</sup> If a country participates with more than one member in the DPG (for example the Japanese Embassy and JICA) this is counted as a single country. Similar for countries such as Germany, France, Australia, etcetera

Given that voluntary action is deeply embedded in Egyptian culture, the UN is committed to fostering volunteerism in its various forms, especially amongst youth, to build local capacities and achieve UNDAF objectives.

Finally, the UN has been called upon in Egypt to support both the Government and its international partners to make progress on the aid effectiveness agenda, as set forth in the Paris Declaration and the Accra Agenda for Action on Aid Effectiveness, which is explained in detail below. This work has been carried out within the framework of the Development Partners Group (DPG), which has been chaired by the UN Resident Coordinator, with support from the UN Coordination Office in Egypt since January 2009.

UNDAF Preparation Process

Rigorous analytical work carried out by the UN, in consultation with government representatives, civil society organizations (CSOs), academics, thematic experts and international development partners, led in 2010 and early 2011, to the preparation of Egypt's UNDAF for its next programming cycle, which was to cover the period 2012-2016. The final draft of this document was ready to be signed in February 2011, when a series of events beginning on 25 January 2011 led the country on a path to greater democracy.

The analytical work carried out previous to January 2011 remains valid in many areas and especially the main findings of the 'Situation Analysis: Key Challenges Facing Egypt', which are reflected in the UNDAF, as well the results of the Mid-Term Review of the UNDAF 2007-2011 and a series of workshops and strategic planning exercises undertaken throughout 2010. However, new opportunities and challenges have arisen since January 2011 that need to be reflected in the UNDAF. From January 2011 to the end of 2012, the UN has continued to work in a coordinated manner implementing the projects and developing new projects/programmes. In parallel, and using the structure of the draft UNDAF, the UN has developed five transition priority strategies under the leadership of the UNDAF Priority Working Groups, which are co-chaired by two UN Agencies. These strategies were then used as the basis for the update of the UNDAF. To ensure full national ownership the MoPIC together with the line ministries and relevant national counterparts and international partners reviewed these strategies and comments/inputs reflected in the UNDAF accordingly.

The content and process of this UNDAF (2013-2017) have been shaped by three mutually-reinforcing and converging work streams:

1. Cairo Agenda for Action: A Mutual Strategy for Development Cooperation

The "Cairo Agenda for Action: A Mutual Strategy for Development Cooperation"<sup>3</sup> (CAA)," takes into account the principles embodied in the Paris Declaration and the Accra Agenda for Action on Aid Effectiveness<sup>4</sup> in the context of the specific development challenges facing Egypt as a "middle-income country" (MIC). In mid-2009, the Ministry of International Cooperation and the Development Partners Group, agreed to undertake the CAA. This decision was guided by two considerations. First, there was realization that Egypt has been experiencing a decline in external aid flows in recent years in spite of the fact that it still faces a rather formidable set of development challenges. Second, the recognition by both

<sup>4</sup> These principles are: national ownership of development priorities and strategies; alignment of development cooperation to be consistent with these strategies and national systems; harmonization to improve coordination and simplify procedures; managing for results; and mutual accountability, whereby both the Government and its development partners are accountable for development results.

the Government and international development partners that steps are needed to improve the effectiveness of development cooperation in Egypt.

The CAA has four components:

- A Situation Analysis (SA) that highlights key development challenges facing Egypt over the next five to ten years;
- The identification of Egypt's top development priorities for which the Government seeks the cooperation of international development partners;
- The setting-up or strengthening of results-based management (RBM) arrangements in the lead ministry or council; and
- A plan of action on aid effectiveness

The UNDAF reflects the main findings of the "Situation Analysis: Key Challenges Facing Egypt," which is the first deliverable of the Cairo Agenda for Action. The Situation Analysis (SA) was prepared by a national taskforce comprising a core group of experienced advisers. This group eventually expanded to embrace more than eighty national experts from Government, civil society, academics and the private sector. The taskforce carefully reviewed a vast array of official documents as well as independent analyses of issues and challenges facing Egypt. It also attended more than twenty-five meetings with national and international development partners, including two full-day consultative meetings with approximately three hundred representatives from civil society, the private sector, academia and the media. Moreover, meetings were held with the Development Partners Group (DPG) and UN agencies to receive their comments on drafts of the Situation Analysis.

The overall framework for the Situation Analysis (SA) is sustainable development with three "pillars" selected to represent the intrinsic and interrelated elements of successful and sustained economic, social and political development, along with protection of the environment and natural resources. The first pillar covers the production and growth parameters of wellbeing, the second pillar provides a socio-political dimension of human rights, and the third pillar ensures protection of the environment. The SA summarizes and takes explicit account of Egypt's progress on the MDGs including its need for accelerated progress in the areas of poverty reduction (including types of poverty, such as increasing malnutrition) and gender equity. Throughout the document, attention is given to addressing disparities (gender, income and geographical) and paying special attention to vulnerable groups.

It was in this context that UN Heads of Agencies decided, to make use of the Situation Analysis as the analytical framework for the draft UNDAF, replacing the more typical Common Country Assessment (CCA) that, in the case of Egypt, was undertaken for the previous two UNDAF cycles. This decision resulted in considerable savings in transaction costs for both Government and the UN, aligned the UNDAF process with a nationally-driven multi-stakeholder assessment, and demonstrated respect for a nationally-owned analysis. Despite the new context after January 2011, Government representatives, the UN and international development partners believe that the Situation Analysis provides a good overview of the development challenges Egypt is facing. To complement the Situation Analysis with possible new opportunities, the UNDAF Priority Working Groups (PWGs) have complemented the analysis through the five priority strategies.

2. Mid-Term Review and Strategic Planning Exercises

The Mid-Term Review (MTR) of the UNDAF (2007-2011)<sup>5</sup> analyzed the relevance, effectiveness and efficiency of the UNDAF towards Egypt's national priorities and vis-à-vis the wider framework of UN Reform, the General Assembly's Triennial Comprehensive Policy Review (TCPR), and the development effectiveness paradigm as outlined in the Accra Agenda for Action on Aid Effectiveness (September 2009). MTR findings concluded that:

- The UNDAF was in line with the Millennium Declaration and internationally agreed development goals, including the MDGs, and national policies and strategies;
- The UN demonstrated its commitment towards the aid effectiveness and harmonization agenda by playing a catalytic role vis-à-vis the broader international development community in the country; and,
- The extent of inter-agency cooperation and harmonization at the programmatic and operational levels had significantly raised in comparison to the first UNDAF cycle (2001-2006), as demonstrated by the development of 17 joint programmes.

In addition, the UN Country Team (UNCT) was commended for its intellectual leadership, analytical competence, and capacity to provide robust technical advice and capacity development. At the same time; however, the MTR concluded that the UNDAF was very ambitious and lacked sufficient focus in its strategic intent.<sup>6</sup>

Three strategic planning exercises were undertaken in 2010. The first of these was a two-day retreat for UN Heads of Agencies and other senior staff in February in order to develop a common understanding of the key concepts and documents underpinning UN Reform and development effectiveness in general (including new CCA/UNDAF guidelines), and to reach an agreement on the next steps in the preparation of the UNDAF and its implementation.

The second event was preceded by a survey on the UN's comparative advantage and capacities for UN staff and national and international partners, along with a SWOT analysis carried out by UN Agencies. The results of these exercises were fed into a two-day Strategic Prioritization Retreat held in September. Participants identified priority programme areas for the next UNDAF, bearing in mind the findings of the Situation Analysis, reflections of the comparative advantages and capacities of the UN in Egypt, the alignment of possible areas for UN work with other development partners, and other issues raised in the February orientation retreat. Other filters used in identifying priority programme areas included the experience with the ongoing UNDAF, regional priorities identified by the Regional UN Development Group (R/UNDG), Egypt's status as a MIC, and its progress on the MDGs.

After the January 2011 revolution, an extra filter was provided to ensure that new opportunities would be taken into consideration. As a result, the filtering exercise can be represented by the following diagram:

<sup>6</sup> The MTR concluded that the encompassing nature of the UNDAF, with five UNDAF Outcomes, 23 Country Programme Outcomes, and 103 Country Programme Outputs, made it hard to focus and manage, and rendered the UNDAF implementation and monitoring and evaluation processes lengthy, difficult to manage, and partially inefficient.

Following this retreat UNDAF PWGs were set up for each priority area, comprised of senior staff from UN agencies and Government line ministries, to work on formulating the UNDAF outcomes, indicators and other aspects of the UNDAF results matrices.

The third event was a workshop conducted with senior staff to refine and align the preliminary set of outcomes with the five UNDAF programming principles (human rights-based approach, gender equality, environmental sustainability, results-based management and capacity development). Subsequently, the PWGs met to formulate and finalize outcomes, identify corresponding results indicators, and prepare a draft of the narrative for each area.

3. Analytical work and consultations with national partners undertaken since January 2011

Acknowledging that each transition towards greater democracy is a unique process which must respond to the aspirations of its people, the UN organized several events in Egypt and the Arab region to share experiences from other countries that went through a transition. Across many transitions similar questions have arisen on how to manage the pace of change, broaden political participation, determine economic models, and tackle inequalities. These gatherings offered an opportunity to hear first-hand from people who have been prominent in transitions in their own countries elsewhere and gain insights from their experience. The UN facilitated the sharing of experiences of countries in Africa, Asia and Latin America which have undergone transitions in recent years to enrich on-going debates on democracy and development in Egypt. These gatherings provided a good opportunity to have South-South experience sharing. The best practices and lessons learned have been taken into consideration while updating the current UNDAF.

A number of new opportunities and challenges that arose since January 2011 have been reflected in this new UNDAF. A series of consultations with national partners carried out during 2011 and 2012 by the five UNDAF PWGs resulted in an updated situation analysis where relevant areas for reformulation of the UNDAF outcomes were identified.

UNDAF Programme Direction and Priorities

Based on the previously described analyses and the consultative process, five priority programme areas were identified for the UNDAF in line with the development needs of Egypt. They are:

- Poverty Alleviation through Pro-Poor Growth and Equity;
- Quality Basic Services;
- Democratic Governance;
- Food Security and Nutrition;
- Environmental Sustainability and Natural Resource Management.

In keeping with its sustainable development and equity orientation, these priority programme areas address gender<sup>7</sup>, socio-economic and geographical disparities and pay special attention to a range of vulnerable groups. This is consistent with the theme for the UNDAF 2013-2017 “Achieving MDGs+ with Inclusive Growth, Freedom, Social Justice and Dignity,” which conveys that the over-arching aim of this UNDAF is to support Egypt’s accelerated progress on the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs). It also reflects that the development programmes carried out under this UNDAF will contribute to inclusive development and a more equitable society that translates into positive impacts on people’s lives.

As outlined in the results matrix, the strategic focus of this UNDAF is maintained at the outcome level, with outputs being developed and articulated in agency country programme documents. There are twenty-three UNDAF outcomes, each involving the contribution from at least two UN agencies. These indicate specific, expected results in terms of institutional performance and human behaviour (individual or social change). While the number of outcomes is similar to the previous UNDAF, the outcomes in the UNDAF 2013-2017 are strongly focused on strategic results rather than ‘activities’. For each, performance indicators have been selected to reinforce the strategic intent of the UNDAF, guide programme design and facilitate monitoring and evaluation. Additionally, UN agencies have highlighted their expected contributions for each outcome.

Assumptions and Risks

A number of risks could affect the achievement of the UNDAF outcomes. Egypt is undergoing a historic political change since the revolution. Periods of transitions are characterized by considerable uncertainty which could impact upon the attainment of the UNDAF outcomes.

The prevalence of a peaceful operating environment encourages new roles and responsibilities for civil society that complement state and private sector action. This environment is essential for development<sup>8</sup> and in achieving the objectives set forth in this UNDAF.

External shocks, such as the current global financial and economic crisis is affecting developed economies and is starting to have an impact in terms of diminishing resources for international development provided by donors. It is important that the international community remains engaged in Egypt, despite its graduation into the ranks of a middle-income country and even more because of the impact of the global financial and economic crisis on the Egyptian economy, which has further exacerbated as a result of the transitional period the country is experiencing. In this regard, international development partners are encouraged to take full account of the considerable development challenges facing Egypt, as their engagement in this historical transition to greater democracy will be crucial.

<sup>7</sup> Gender mainstreaming is the adopted approach for this UNDAF. Beyond issues of presence and participation, this involves: issues of power relations and asymmetries; access to resources, services and entitlements; exclusions, vulnerability and marginalization; and material and ideological dimensions.

<sup>8</sup> As suggested in the Egypt Human Development Report 2008 ‘Egypt’s Social Contract: the Role of Civil Society’.

The threat of further rising commodity prices and particularly that of increased food prices should also be considered as a risk that would put the food security of millions of Egyptians at risk, especially those living under, or just above, the poverty line.

Implementation of the UNDAF will be dependent on the availability of resources. To cover the funding gap, given the limited core funds available to UN agencies in middle-income countries, fundraising will be undertaken by the Resident Coordinator and UN agencies. In this regard, the support of the Ministry of Planning and International Cooperation is invaluable in encouraging key international development partners to co-fund similar joint programmes, and helping mobilize domestic resources, both from Government budgets and Egypt's well-endowed private sector. Resources would be used for high-priority joint initiatives, as is the case with a number of initiatives currently underway. In addition, since UNDAF priority areas and regional priorities identified by the R/UNDG are strongly aligned, efforts by the R/UNDG to mobilize resources that support national initiatives will be highly beneficial.

Finally, other risks relate to the technical and managerial capacities of the public sector, which requires improvement. Although a full transformation of the public administration is unlikely to be seen during the UNDAF period, it is assumed that promising steps are being taken by Government, to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of Egypt's public administration. In this regard, the contributions of international development partners towards initiatives such as strengthening national capacity for results-based management (the third deliverable of the Cairo Agenda for Action) are important and need to be reinforced.

Section 2 – UNDAF Results

Taking into account the Situation Analysis and the participatory process described in Section 1, five UNDAF priority programme areas and 23 specific outcomes have been identified and are summarized in Annex 2. Additionally, a comprehensive mapping of all UNDAF outcomes has been completed to provide a detailed breakdown of their coherence with, and consistency to, Egypt’s progress on the MDGs. This includes national development challenges described in the SA, and regional development priorities identified by R/UNDG. In keeping with the aim of the UN to support inclusive development and a more equitable society, these outcomes also reflect the UNDAF’s emphasis of reducing gender, income and geographical disparities, and addressing the special needs of vulnerable groups<sup>9</sup>. In this context, this section highlights specific results and related UN agency contributions for each priority area, which have been influenced by their alignment with other development actors and the UN’s comparative advantage and capacity.

Poverty Alleviation Through Pro-Poor Growth and Equity

UNDAF Outcome 1.1: Government is operating with efficient and adequately resourced mechanisms of awareness creation, equitable targeting, delivering and monitoring of social protection services and access to adequate and affordable housing, for children, young people, rural women, elderly and other vulnerable groups.

UNDAF Outcome 1.2: Government applies improved pro-poor, inclusive and gender sensitive policies in financial and non-financial services supporting Micro and Small Enterprises (MSE).

UNDAF Outcome 1.3: Strengthened private sector businesses in tourism, agro-industries, and other key pro-poor sectors are able to address gender, equity and environmental sustainability

UNDAF Outcome 1.4: More and better skilled youth, women and other vulnerable groups have decent job opportunities.

Link with the MDGs, Millennium Declaration, and Other Treaties Relevant for the UN

UN action in this UNDAF priority programme area will contribute to five MDGs (1, 3, 6, 7 and 8). The priority area is also relevant to three other UN treaties: 1951 Convention relating to refugees and the 1967 Protocol; the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families; 1969 (then) Organization of African Unity Convention and Convention on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW); Convention on the Rights of the Child and finally, Egypt’s commitments under international legal instruments including, inter alia, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR); implementation of Universal Periodic Review (UPR) recommendations (including #108, #110 and #118, which were accepted by the Government of Egypt); the ILO Conventions on Employment Policy, Vocational Guidance and Training and Employment Security and related recommendations, as well as the UN General Assembly Special Session (UNGASS) Declaration of commitment to HIV.

Link with National Priorities

The four outcomes identified in this priority programme area “Poverty Alleviation through pro-poor Growth and Equity” were influenced by the three development challenges outlined in the Situation Analysis. The most significant concerns under Pillar 1 (Sustainable and Inclusive Growth) were related to:

<sup>9</sup> This term is used generically, and unless otherwise specified, will be used to represent the following: the poor; women; children, young people (including adolescents); the elderly; persons with disabilities; persons living with Hepatitis C, tuberculosis, HIV and other life threatening communicable or non-communicable diseases; persons living in deprived or environmentally at risk areas and refugees, migrants and asylum seekers.

macro policy and stability, which have direct impacts on the poor in terms of inflation; allocation of subsidies, and budget expenditure on public goods. Pillars 2 and 3 identified other issues that have direct and indirect impacts on the lives of the poor, which are also addressed including demography, youth, education system reform, food security and urban planning.

In keeping with the human rights framework, the outcomes were drafted to respond to challenges posed in the Situational Analysis focusing on “strengthening protection, and respect and fulfilment for Human Rights in line with Egypt’s Human Rights commitments.” They also reflect the SA’s special focus on vulnerable groups (women, children, people with disabilities, refugees, the elderly, people affected by HIV), as well as the rights of refugees, asylum seekers and migrants in Egypt. The latter is noted particularly in Outcome 1.4 whereby well-managed migration can be linked to alleviating local employment pressure and promoting socio-economic development.

UN Comparative Advantage and Capacity

The UN’s capacity to pool technical and financial resources and expertise and to “deliver as one” optimizes the use of resources and benefits the country as a whole since the multidimensional aspects of poverty reduction are addressed from different perspectives. There is also the comparative advantage of working at both national and local levels, on all dimensions of poverty, and in the areas of gender responsive, pro-poor public policy and social change.

Cross-cutting Issues

The interrelationship of cross-cutting issues such as gender, capacity building, environmental sustainability and youth were taken into account in the causal analysis of this priority programme area and in the formulation its UNDAF outcomes. These cross-cutting issues appear in a more specific manner such as ensuring women and vulnerable group safety in improved urban settings; increasing employability for women, their access and control over resources; or ensuring that youth and vulnerable groups have better access to employment services and skill development opportunities. UNDAF outcomes have a multiple focus: a) the supply side orientation supports institutional strengthening, and b) the demand side orientation emphasizes giving attention to women’s empowerment and access to productive resources such as employment and entrepreneurship.

Alignment with Other Actors

In addressing this priority programme area, UN collective action takes into account World Bank efforts in enhancing access to finance for micro and small enterprises. This also includes supporting job readiness and placement for marginalized youth and bolstering the European Union’s development assistance to reform the technical and vocational education and training system (TVET), as well as providing sector policy support in education, health, rural and social development. Also the African Bank for Development supports several initiatives in this field. Additionally, UN initiatives are complementary to Canada’s Strategy which emphasizes “sustainable growth with a renewed focus on private sector development” and Italy’s work in poverty alleviation that includes support for the legal rights of children, girls and women, and the technical and financial support to Egyptian SMEs.

Anticipated Results

The overall anticipated result of the UN’s contributions to these four outcomes is clearly focused on the demand (institutional capacity of Government agencies and the private sector) and supply sides (capacity of youth, women and other vulnerable groups and their improved quality of life) of poverty alleviation. They place emphasis on social protection policies, micro and small businesses MSEs, increased employment by facilitating the creation of more decent jobs by effectively referring students and job-seekers to employment opportunities, by enhancing education and training in line with labour market requirements and international standards creating a proper skilled labour force, as well as facilitated access to work opportunities abroad, and helping create a more skilled labour force, with a focus on young people and women. Child poverty and its multidimensional aspects (going beyond the income aspects, including health, education, socialization, housing, community participation etc.) that also affect migrant, refugee and asylum-seekers' children not integrated in the host communities will be addressed.

Quality Basic Services

UNDAF Outcome 2.1: Vulnerable mothers and children under 5 have increased access to continuous & integrated primary health care (PHC) services, particularly perinatal care (PC) and nutritional services.

UNDAF Outcome 2.2: Women of reproductive age, men and young people have increased access to quality Family Planning/Reproductive Health services.

UNDAF Outcome 2.3: The health system is strengthened to improve the health literacy<sup>10</sup> of vulnerable populations (particularly on proper feeding practices, birth spacing and Family Planning, prevention of Communicable Diseases (CDs) and Non Communicable Diseases (NCDs)).

UNDAF Outcome 2.4: Vulnerable populations have improved access to quality prevention, care, support and treatment for Viral Hepatitis C, HIV and TB.

<sup>10</sup> The capacity to obtain, interpret and understand basic health information and services and the willingness and competence to use such information and services to enhance health.

UNDAF Outcome 2.5: National health system is strengthened for preparedness and response to public health emergencies with special focus on Avian and Pandemic Influenza in accordance with International Health Regulations (IHR 2005).

UNDAF Outcome 2.6: Children in Egypt aged 4-5 have more access to inclusive quality pre-primary education.

UNDAF Outcome 2.7: Children in Egypt aged 6 – 14 have more access to, and complete, quality basic education (formal and non-formal), with a special focus on vulnerable groups and gender equality.

Link with the MDGs, Millennium Declaration, possible other treaties relevant for the UN

This UNDAF priority programme area is guided by the Millennium Declaration with particular emphasis on the values and principles of equity, equality, and protecting the vulnerable. The proposed outcomes directly contribute to national and global efforts to achieve seven MDGs (1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7). UN action on the Quality Basic Services outcomes also contribute to Egypt's efforts in fulfilling basic human rights as per international conventions, treaties and global initiatives that have been endorsed by the Government. These outcomes are aligned with: CEDAW, CRC, World Fit for Children, Education For All (except goal 4 on Adult Literacy), the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, ICPD, UNGASS Declaration of commitment to HIV, the World Health Assembly (WHA) Resolution on Health of Migrants (2008), the Global Strategy for Women and Children's Health launched by the UN in September 2010, and the recent Child Survival Call to Action - A promise Renewed<sup>11</sup> for ending preventable child deaths, launched in 2012.

Link with National Priorities

The outcomes in this priority area will address key national challenges identified under Pillar II of the Situation Analysis relating to socio-political rights. These challenges include: Egypt's demographic transition with a marked youth bulge and coupled with the slow reduction of the population growth rate; child deprivation and regional disparities; vulnerable populations' poor access to maternal, neonatal and child health (MNCH) continuum of care and HIV prevention interventions; increasing child malnutrition; on-going transmission of viral hepatitis C and HIV; needed system support to combat TB; lack of a prevention strategy in the face of potential public health emergencies (especially H5N1, H1N1); inadequate health knowledge compounded by high levels of risk behaviour; equal opportunity for pre-school education, and access to quality basic education.

The proposed UNDAF outcomes have been framed to specifically address national development challenges in health, reproductive health/family planning, and basic education while also responding to the Government of Egypt specific request for development assistance in these areas. They are also consistent with various national policies and strategies such as the National Food and Nutrition Strategy, National Population and Family Planning Strategy, Health Sector Reform, National Strategic Plan on HIV/AIDS, National Strategic Plan for Pre-University Education Reform, National Strategic Plan on Prevention and Control of Blood-borne Viral Hepatitis, the National Strategic Plan on Crisis Management, and the recent MoHP renewed commitment to ending preventable child deaths.

UN Comparative Advantage and Capacity

In the health and education service sectors, UN agencies in Egypt have extensive experience in advocacy, policy planning, generating and strengthening strategic information programme management, system strengthening, capacity development and providing technical support with various line ministries: Ministry of Health and Population (MoHP), Ministry of Education (MoE), and Ministry of Insurance and Social Affairs (MISA). Additionally, the UN's collective expertise covers a wide range of areas. For example, in the fields of Primary Health Care (PHC) and young child survival and development, there are strong skills and experience in continuum of care and community based initiatives, community and behaviour change for improving overall practices, Infant and Young Child Feeding (IYCF), Expanded programme on Immunization (EPI), Integrated Management of Childhood Health (IMCI), school feeding and food supplementation programs. In terms of maternal and women's health competencies, there is also extensive UN experience in safe motherhood, perinatal care, family planning and reproductive health interventions as well as health promotion, and targeted initiatives on combating communicable and non-communicable diseases, addressing emerging epidemics (H5N1, H1N1), and supporting national TB and HIV/AIDS programming.

The UN is also skilled in addressing integrated early childhood development, inclusive education, child friendly schools, promotion of community based education initiatives, school national accreditation and quality assurance, gender based violence including female genital cutting/mutilation, and HIV among most-at-risk young people. Finally, the UN is well-placed to support its national partners to assist those who are currently known to fall outside existing safety nets, such as migrants and refugees, leaving them highly vulnerable to HIV and other infectious diseases.

Cross-cutting Issues

Issues such as gender, capacity building, environmental sustainability and youth were other considerations taken into account in the causal analysis of this priority programme area and in formulating its UNDAF outcomes. For example, the causal analysis highlighted the gender dimension in inequality of access to health care and noted that the response of the health system be modified accordingly. Therefore, these outcomes take into account that health system improvement must move beyond providing more facilities, drugs, and staff to include reorganization and reorientation that promotes access and client focus, and accepts women's roles as providers and promoters of preventive, as well as curative health care in the household and the community. A focus on young people and adolescents is referenced in Outcomes 2.2, 2.3 and 2.4 as along with improving strategic information generation, analysis and use.

Alignment with Other Actors

Priority areas align with national reform plans in the education and health sectors and support and complement the GoE efforts and other donor partners. This is particularly true in the areas of early childhood development, basic education, and elimination of disparities that have been identified by both MoE and MoHP as challenges. Coordination of efforts is ensured through regular meetings with concerned government counterparts and the Development Partners Group (DPG).

There is also coherence with other Government stakeholders interested in basic services such as MoLD, National Council for Childhood and Motherhood (NCCM), National Population Council, (NPC), National Council for Women (NCW), and Ministry of Interior (MoI), as well as national CSOs who have a key role to play in supporting sub-national and community-based initiatives. Multilateral and bilateral donor agencies with an interest in the health, population and education sectors have major roles to play in providing financial and technical support to the government. Additionally UN agencies will continue working with the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Other Diseases to maximize benefits and rationalize resources for Egypt.

Anticipated Result

The anticipated overall result of the UN's contributions to these seven outcomes is equitable access to basic health services, reproductive health and family planning, and quality basic education, especially for vulnerable groups.

Agency Contributions to Outcome Results

UNDAF Outcomes	Outcome 2.1 Vulnerable mothers and children under 5 have increased access to continuous and integrated primary health care (PHC) services, particularly perinatal care (PC) and nutritional services.	Outcome 2.2: Women, men and young people have increased access to quality FP/RH services.	Outcome 2.3 The health system is strengthened to improve the health literacy of vulnerable populations (particularly on proper feeding practices, birth spacing and Family Planning, prevention of Communicable Diseases (CDs) and Non Communicable Diseases (NCDs).	Outcome 2.4: Vulnerable populations have improved access to quality prevention, care, support and treatment for Hepatitis C, HIV and TB.

	Provide technical support that focuses on bio-security measures, surveillance planning, outbreak investigation, and identifying risk points along the value chain and reviewing relevant health-related legislation.
ITU			Coordinate with GoE in the utilization of the following ITU initiatives: connect a School, broadband connectivity, and Child Online Protection, with the aim of improving the efficiency and reach of the basic education system.
UNHCR			Support improving access to quality education and health screening amongst refugee children.
IOM		Assist MoE to improve migrant children's access to quality pre-primary education.	Provide equipment to selected public schools as well as those serving migrants /refugee communities

Possible Areas of Joint Programmes

In addition to the ongoing joint HIV programming efforts, two new areas of joint health programming can be found in UNDAF Outcomes 2.2 and 2.5. UN agencies will ensure the integration of FP/RH into the family health model, support the MOHP in improving maternal health, help develop a national strategy for adolescent and youth health (including reproductive health), and continue to support the GoE in empowering women, combating medicalization of FGM/C, developing a national strategy for integrating GBV in health service delivery, promoting reproductive rights, and ensuring the availability of evidence-based population data for decision-makers.

Secondly, UN agencies will work together to build on the partnerships formed in 2006 with the GoE to provide additional support in strengthening national health system preparedness and capacity development based on the “all hazard approach.” Support will be provided to raise national capacities to develop mechanisms for information sharing, and risk assessment. In addition to on-going joint programmes – UN Girls Education Initiative and Combating Worst Forms of Child Labour through Education – there is additional opportunity for joint education programming in the next UNDAF Cycle in formulating initiatives for Inclusive Education for Children with Special Needs and marginalized children, Early Childhood Development

Democratic Governance

UNDAF Outcome 3.1: National and local capacities and systems are enhanced for decentralized, inclusive and gender sensitive planning, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation.

UNDAF Outcome 3.2: National institutions and CSOs are strengthened to further protect, respect and fulfil human rights in line with Egypt’s international commitments, with a special focus on women, children, disabled, refugees, the elderly and migrants.

UNDAF Outcome 3.3: Anticorruption and accountability institutions, legislation and policies are reformed, modernized and transparent to ensure social justice and Rule of Law in line with Egypt’s International commitments.

UNDAF Outcome 3.4: The voice, leadership, civic engagement and political participation of women and young people are visible and effective in public spheres.

UNDAF Outcome 3.5: Institutions, legislation and policies are responsive to the immediate requirements of the transition to democracy

Link with the MDGs, Millennium Declaration, possible other treaties relevant for the UN

Primarily, the priority programme area on Governance supports the GoE to meet its commitments to the different international human rights instruments, such as the Universal Declaration on Human Rights, Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW), Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC), United Nations Convention Against Corruption (UNCAC), Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (CESCR), Convention on the Right of Migrant Workers (CRMW) and the 1967 Protocol, the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families (ICMW) , the UNGASS Declaration of commitment to HIV, the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees (CRSR) , the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRDP); implement the recommendations by the UN Special Rapporteurs and implement the Universal Periodic Review (UPR) recommendations which enjoy the support of Egypt. Additionally, they reflect the 2010 recommendations of UPR relating to migrants' and refugees' human rights, continuing efforts to eradicate female genital mutilation/cutting (FGM/C), and increased action to combat trafficking in persons, as well as the CRC Concluding Observations on Egypt (2011) and CEDAW review, which were accepted by the Government

Secondly, UNDAF outcomes respond to four MDGs (1, 3, 6 and 7). Those outcomes with an emphasis on supporting policies, national plans, budgets and systems for decentralization, and enhancing the efficiency, transparency and accountability of public service delivery at both the national and local levels are directly linked to MDG1. The focus on strengthening young people and women's leadership and representation in decision making and legislative structures is directly linked to MDG3. Preparation and implementation of activities linked to the Urban Development Plans for cities, districts and governorates (including informal settlements) contribute to MDG 7, and MDG 6 is addressed by respecting the human rights of refugees and people living with or affected by HIV.

Link with National Priorities

The UN support in the area of democratic governance responds to the key features of the transition to democracy and institutional development in Egypt such as the increased calls for transparency; anti-corruption and asset recovery; the respect for human rights; the increased momentum for transparent and credible elections and the setting up of an independent elections management body; the modernization of the justice sector including justice for children; transitional justice; strengthening the voice of women and youth, capacity building and engagement with civil society. This is in addition to key priorities of the transition period such as rebuilding confidence between the people and the police; the national dialogue, responsiveness to the aspirations for social justice and equitable and effective access to public services at the national and local level. This priority program area also addresses several challenges outlined in the Situation Analysis such as the poor representation of women in the political and decision making spheres, and the need to protect the rights of women, children, the disabled, refugees, the elderly and migrants. The outcomes recognize the need for a marked change in attitudes and culture towards the protection, respect and fulfilment of human rights. . This includes strengthening human rights institutions and addressing the absence of an enabling political, social and economic environment for young people's and women's involvement, so as to establish an inclusive culture of participation.

UNDAF outcomes take into consideration the identified problems such as high population density in some cities and the need to increase the inhabited areas, as well as decentralize and localize Egypt's development process by delegating authority and responsibility across different levels of government. Furthermore, the situational analysis (SA) findings identified the need for: 1) national governance indicators, 2) gender sensitive national and local development planning and budgeting, and 3) public policies and programmes that are guided by human rights principles. Finally, the SA also identified deficiencies in legal administration, law enforcement provisions, as well as a culture of enabling corrupt practices that are limiting the impact of government efforts to reach all sectors. Furthermore, the existence of child deprivations and regional disparities are all addressed in this priority programme area.

The UNDAF outcomes are aligned with national priorities including the establishment of the Transparency and Integrity Committee within MSAD, the National Coordinating Committee for Anti-corruption to follow-up on Egypt's commitments to the UNCAC, the enactment of the Law to Combat Human Trafficking and adoption of the National Plan of Action Against Human Trafficking (2011-2013), the establishment of the National Council for Disability. They also take into account recent findings about violence against women and children and key policy instruments. These include the implementation of the 2008 Child Law, including capacity development of governorate and district Child Protection Committees, the protection of Egyptian and foreign children's rights through initiatives to prevent irregular migration or unaccompanied minors, in addition to the restructuring of the National Council for Women (NCW) and its adopted national plan. UNDAF outcomes address the needs to strengthen local development and local governance and ensure the rights of local committees in deciding on their own activities.

UN Comparative Advantage and Capacity

The UN has been proactive in providing technical expertise, the mobilization of comparative experience and best practices and has extensive experience in advising the Egyptian government on sensitive topics such as child and women's rights, human development, gender responsive planning and budgeting, rights of migrants and refugees, anti-corruption, elections, access to justice and supporting strategies to counteract stigma towards people living with HIV. UN agencies have also demonstrated their convening capacity to engage all stakeholders and actors (government, private sector, civil society organizations (CSO), media) on sensitive issues such as corruption and human rights at all levels of society.

Cross-cutting Issues

UN support is focused on capacity development at both national and local levels. South-South Cooperation is critical for learning from comparative experiences and best practices and UN assistance has facilitated the sharing of international experiences.

While gender is considered in all outcomes, Outcome 3.4 specifically focuses on building the capacities of women for better political participation, engagement and strengthening conditions for women's participation and influence on a range of decision-making processes including their ability to hold government and society accountable for upholding their rights. In comparison, Outcome 3.1 incorporates capacity development in gender sensitive planning, budgeting monitoring and evaluation, and Outcome 3.2 will follow-up on Egypt's implementation of CEDAW concluding remarks. Egypt is already a centre of excellence on gender responsive budgeting and gender mainstreaming in the national plan.

Young people's civic engagement and volunteerism is important for this priority programme area, and is specifically highlighted in Outcome 3.4. Although RBM and capacity development are two fundamental themes of this UNDAF, M&E is found in Outcomes 3.1, 3.2 (monitoring child rights in Egypt against a comprehensive set of indicators for the welfare and protection of Egyptian children) and 3.4 (monitoring the civic engagement of youth and target communities).

Alignment with Other Actors

The UN implements all its programmes and activities in co-operation with line ministries, national and local authorities, national coordinating committees as well as the national human rights institutions (NCHR, NCW, NCCM) and the Parliamentary secretariat. Particular emphasis will be placed on linkages to the:

- National Action Plan for Human Rights to be developed by NHCR
- National Strategic Framework Supporting Women's Rights, Gender Equality and the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination and Ending Violence Against Women; and the adoption of gender-responsive budgeting and performance-based budgeting by the MoF; and gender planning, monitoring and evaluation by the MSAD
- The National Anti-Corruption Coordinating Committee
- The National Strategy for Childhood and Motherhood in Egypt, currently being prepared by NCCM
- The National Youth Policy to be developed by the Ministry of State for Youth
- The National Action Plan of the National Council for Women (NCW)

In this priority programme area, the UN will continue to coordinate and establish synergies with bilateral and multilateral development partners. The UNDAF outcomes will utilize the existence of the UN Thematic Funds such as the United Nations Democracy Fund (UNDEF), Democratic Governance Thematic Trust Fund and the Fund for Gender Equality.

The anticipated overall result of the UN's contributions to these five UNDAF outcomes is strengthened national governance capacity to promote human rights, enhanced transparency and accountability, combat corruption, implement and enhance youth and women's participation and strengthen civic engagement.

1. Central and local authorities have a strengthened capacity for decentralized, inclusive and gender sensitive planning and budgeting processes, as well as a strengthened capacity for evidence-based M&E.
2. Women, children, juveniles, refugees, migrants, the poor, elderly and the disabled benefit from enhanced culture for the protection, respect and fulfilment of human rights and have improved access to judicial services and legal aid. Strengthened co-operation of national authorities and national human rights institutions with UN treaty bodies and the UN Human rights mechanisms.
3. National Anti-Corruption Strategy developed and improved ranking for Egypt on international indicators for transparency and anti-corruption.
4. Improved roles and higher visibility of actions taken by women in decision making positions and more active youth structures/groups, along with higher positive community perception of young people's right to participation.
5. Institutions, legislation and policies are responsive to the immediate requirements of the transition to democracy

Possible Areas for Joint Programmes

In addition to joint work on improving the portrayal and social perception of women and girls’ rights, FGM/C, human trafficking and disability, there is great potential for new areas of joint UN programming. This includes programme opportunities in the areas of youth, anti-corruption, women’s leadership, family empowerment, and violence against women and girls.

Food Security and Nutrition

UNDAF Outcome 4.1: Relevant institutions/bodies develop and implement evidence-based policies and joint sustainable interventions on food security and nutrition in a coordinated manner.

UNDAF Outcome 4.2: Food subsidy system delivers good quality food packages efficiently to vulnerable and poor families and targeted high risk populations.

UNDAF Outcome 4.3: Vulnerable people, especially women and children, consume adequate, healthy and nutritious food.

UNDAF Outcome 4.4: Efficient agriculture and food production supply chains, including the adoption of good agricultural practices, are achieved.

Links with Millennium Declaration, MDGs and Other Treaties

This priority programme area is aligned with the Millennium Declaration A/resolution 55/L.2, especially Section III - Development and poverty eradication; Section IV - Protecting our common environment; and Section VI -Protecting the vulnerable. It is also directly relevant to five MDGs (1, 4, 5, 6 and 7) and two specific UN treaties - the Rome Declaration on World Food Security and the World Food Summit Plan of Action. The Rome Declaration calls for UN member states to work together to halve the number of chronically undernourished people by 2015. Its Plan of Action sets targets for government and non-governmental organizations for achieving food security, at the individual, household, national, regional and global levels.

Links to National Priorities

This priority programme area addresses many challenges outlined in the Situation Analysis, including high population growth rates. From the SA it was found that increasing per capita income and urbanization are fuelling rising demands for food, especially cereals, while Egypt's agriculture potential is diminishing in relative terms. The analysis also showed that with an average of 700 litres of water per head, Egypt is now considered 'water poor,' and faces challenges related to poor sanitation, health coverage, and housing for the poor. It is also noted that deteriorating health and nutritional conditions are expected to be further compounded by water scarcity and climate change. It has been suggested that the rise in malnutrition rates could be partially attributed to the negative effects of climate change, endemic avian influenza, and high international food and fuel prices. Among the most vulnerable groups are the poor, women and children and migrants, refugees and asylum seekers. Finally, the SA highlighted the importance of conditional cash transfers for the extreme poor and expanded social safety nets.

The UNDAF outcomes on Food Security and Nutrition respond to a number of challenges under Pillars II and III in the Situation Analysis. They also respond to the Government's request that development partners focus on institutional capacity development, improving policy making capacities and the creation of an enabling environment. These three dimensions constitute the foundation of Outcome 4.1. In comparison, Outcome 4.3 responds to the Government's emphasis on health, nutrition, primary education, and environmental challenges, especially for vulnerable groups such as women and children. Outcomes 4.2 and 4.4 specifically reflect SA findings on the importance of the agriculture sector and sustainable use of natural resources as engines of growth, as well as the promotion of food security and agriculture as critical dimensions for poverty alleviation.

UN Comparative Advantage and Capacity

Seven UN agencies have expertise that spans the entire food security and nutrition field, as well as considerable experience in Egypt working on various dimensions of this priority area. More recently, the UN has conducted a joint analysis of food security challenges and is currently assisting the GoE to tackle bottlenecks and constraints related to food availability and accessibility, as well as nutritional concerns, strengthening livelihoods and providing support to vulnerable groups. At the same time, the UN supported the GoE to complete the Nutrition Landscape Analysis, which identified the willingness and capacity of the MOHP to address and scaled up action on nutrition. This serves as a solid basis and framework for UN contribution to this priority programme area.

Cross-cutting Issues

There are several cross-cutting issues that are addressed in this priority programme area. First, taking into account Egypt's Middle-Income Country (MIC) status, capacity development is stressed in all outcomes and indicators, through collaborative work with the GoE, as well as improvement of the food subsidy system, ensuring that vulnerable groups consume healthy and nutritious foods, and improving agricultural practices (as seen in Outcome 4.1 that emphasizes the upstream policy orientation of the UNDAF).

Second, the gender dimension is a key element in safeguarding household food security, given that 75% of the agro-food chain activities are performed by women who also have a major role in food production, access and utilization. Gender issues are addressed through three outcomes in this priority area: 4.1, where data analysis and policies will take into account gender disparities; Outcome 4.3 that specifically focuses on women and children, and outcome 4.4 that introduces the Gender Equity Seal with an objective to develop, promote, and encourage gender equity in the firms related to food production and agri-business.

Third, Outcome 4.4 will contribute to environmental sustainability, since tracking agricultural products through supply chains has a positive impact on the environment and the quality of fresh produce. In addition, shifting farmers' attention to serve higher quality markets and export markets will lead to cleaner production (organic or with monitored levels of pesticides). Finally, there will be a special emphasis on improving the nutritional status/behaviour of women and children including adolescent girls, as well as populations living in the most deprived areas.

Alignment with Other Actors

The UN will place particular emphasis on working with the recently formed National Food Security and Policy Board, which serves as a platform for coordination amongst stakeholders in this priority area. As a result, strategic partnerships will also be fostered and maintained with relevant donors and international organizations interested in, or already working on, this development area such as the United States, Italy and the EU. Efforts will be made to synchronize UN efforts and interventions with other development partners. To expand those concerned with this development priority, private sector partnerships will be sought along with funding through Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) schemes. Additionally, outreach activities will also include global and regional funding mechanisms. Given the data gaps and need to understand the full scale of issues underlying food security and nutrition problems in Egypt, the UN will actively seek to collaborate with academia and national research centres in studies and follow up surveys. Finally, proactive engagement with the media will be pursued to strengthen advocacy, outreach and public awareness, especially pertaining to changing food consumption behaviours.

Anticipated Result

The anticipated result of UN contributions to all four outcomes is improved status of the population in Egypt, particularly women and children, with regards to food security, food safety, and nutrition. The expected result of each outcome is listed below and their achievement will be directly linked to, and affected by, the provision of quality basic services, especially health and nutrition, which is UNDAF priority programme area 2.

Agency Contributions to Outcome Results

UNDAF Outcomes	Outcome 4.1: Relevant institutions/bodies develop and implement evidence based policies and joint sustainable intervention on food security, food safety and nutrition in coordinated manner.	Outcome 4.2: Food subsidy system delivers good quality food packages and in an efficient manner, to vulnerable and poor families and other targeted high risk populations.	Outcome 4.3: Vulnerable people, especially women and children, consume adequate, healthy and nutritious food.	Outcome 4.4: Efficient food production supply chains, including the adoption of good agricultural practices, are achieved.
Anticipated Results	The GOE endorses and implements an integrated national long-term food security strategy and action plan.	Vulnerable people have access to better quality commodities in the food subsidy system.	Vulnerable populations have better access and awareness regarding adequate and nutritious foods.	Starting with better agricultural practices, food is produced and marketed more efficiently.

Environment and Natural Resource Management

UNDAF Outcome 5.1: The Government of Egypt has adopted and effectively implemented sound Climate Change adaptation and disaster risk reduction policies and programmes focused on vulnerable sectors, groups and high risk geographic locations.

UNDAF Outcome 5.2: The Government of Egypt, private sector and civil society have complied with Multilateral Environmental Agreements, adopted policies, and implemented operational measures towards a green and sustainable economy and society including, EE, RE, low carbon cleaner technologies, SWM, POPs, ODS, and Carbon Finance Mechanisms.

UNDAF Outcome 5.3: The Government of Egypt and local communities have strengthened mechanisms for the sustainable management of, and access to, natural resources such as land, water and ecosystems.

Link with Millennium Declaration, MDGs and Other Relevant Treaties

All UNDAF Outcomes in this priority programme area address MDG7 and contribute to two other MDGs (1 and 3). In line with MDG7, Outcome 5.2 focuses on environmental services such as water supply and sanitation, while Outcome 5.3 centres on the management of natural resources in accordance with the integration of environmental policies into national development plans. Finally, UN action in this development priority area supports several Global Environmental Agreements including UN Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC), the Montreal Protocol, the UN Convention on Combating Desertification (UNCCD), and the Convention on Biological Diversity (CBD), Hyogo Framework, and contributes to the MDGs since Egypt is signatory to more than 60 Multi-lateral Environmental Agreements.

Link with National Priorities

These UNDAF Outcomes respond to a number of challenges under Pillar III of the SA, as well as the priorities identified by the Egyptian Cabinet. Outcome 5.1 responds to the need to manage climate change risks as outlined through national priorities and the National Adaptation Strategy. Outcome 5.2 is consistent with national interest in solar energy as a renewable source of energy. This outcome also responds to four specific challenges identified in the SA: renewable energy, energy security, energy efficiency, and environmental protection. UN action under Outcome 5.3 makes a contribution to addressing a range of challenges related to investment needs in the agriculture sector, deteriorating land efficiency, land allocation, strengthening technical and institutional capacities for managing natural resources, expanding fisheries, water shortages and environmental protection.

UN Comparative Advantage and Capacity

A number of UN agencies have a great deal of expertise in the area of environmental conservation, which is coupled with long standing experience with the Ministry of Environment, Water Resources and Agriculture on the sustainable management of natural resources including air, water, land and biodiversity. Regarding the emergence of climate change as a new issue, UN Agencies have developed the technical capacity to conduct nationwide and sectoral assessments of climate change impacts on migration, food security, human settlements, water resources, coastal zones and agriculture and have supported the development of responsive policies and measures. Furthermore, the UN has traditionally been the main supporter for Egypt's compliance with multi-lateral environmental agreements, including one of the most successful global programmes for phasing-out ozone depleting substances in line with the Montreal Protocol. In the energy sector, the UN is working with Egypt's Supreme Energy Council to support national policy reform, as well as improve energy efficiency and promote renewable energy resources with the Ministries of Environment, Industry, Electricity and Investment. Finally, UNDAF Outcomes 5.1 to 5.3 build on similar outcomes found in the previous UNDAF, which enable UN agencies to capitalize on earlier initiatives and continuing activities.

Cross-cutting Issues

Educating women about the impacts of climate change, natural resources management and ways to reduce climate change impacts are crucial components of extension services to inform female farmers about appropriate technological innovations, improved storage facilities and resource management. Improving women's economic status is a key element in activities related to accessing and managing natural resources and is an imperative given the fact that women are directly connected to locally based natural resources. Additionally, special attention will be given to other vulnerable groups affected by climate change and disasters including children, the elderly, people living in climate affected areas, as well as environmentally affected migrants.

Individual and institutional capacity development will be one of the main strategies for outcome implementation, with a focus on job creation in the areas of climate change mitigation and adaptation, energy management and sustainable management of natural resources. Additionally, in terms of South-South co-operation, UN Agencies will continue to support regional activities in climate change mitigation and adaptation, Ozone Depleting Substances (ODS) reduction, energy efficiency promotion, renewable energy resources management and shared natural resources, as well as sustainable development practices.

Gender issues in these UNDAF outcomes will be covered through gender responsive strategic urban planning, along with a gender analysis of migration patterns, a qualitative assessment of women's food security in climate affected areas and in the management of natural resources.

Alignment with Other Actors

UN system-wide cooperation with the GoE on climate change will continue with the ongoing Joint Programme on Climate Change Risk Management that involves six UN Agencies working with four Government entities and is funded by Spain. UN system activities will complement initiatives implemented by the European Union and the Netherlands on climate change adaptation. It will also collaborate with the UN Climate Change Adaptation Fund in building resilience of food security systems to climate change. With respect to climate change mitigation, the UN will cooperate with the EU, Spain and Germany in providing technical assistance to targeted beneficiaries in order to capitalize on the energy efficiency and pollution abatement credit lines to be established by Germany and the AfDB. The UN will also continue to join forces with Italy on strengthening Egypt's protected areas.

Further cooperation and coordination with other partners will be achieved through meetings of the DPG. UN Agencies will foster Public Private Partnerships (PPP) in the areas of climate change mitigation and "green economy" while funding will be sought through Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) networks. In addition, strategic partnerships will be fostered with the government, development partners, CSOs and national NGOs, which play a key-role in supporting sub-national and community-based initiatives for climate change adaptation, disaster risk reduction and sustainable management of natural resources. Finally, a proactive engagement with the national and local media will be pursued to strengthen advocacy outreach and public awareness, especially for changing non-sustainable behaviours and moving towards a greener society and economy.

Anticipated Result

The overall anticipated result of UN contributions to all three outcomes is environmentally sound development and effective management of Egypt's natural resources and an effect to reduce losses from disaster risk.

Agency Contribution to Outcome Results

Section 3 – Initiatives outside UNDAF Outcomes

The signatory agencies of this UNDAF have committed to focus their development cooperation on the five priority programme areas discussed in Section 2. In addition, four UN agencies will undertake supplementary action that is aligned with the priority areas, but falls outside the UNDAF outcomes. These initiatives are as follows:

1. UNEP will provide support – with funds from the MDG Achievement Fund – to help Egypt align its climate risk management and human development initiatives in pursuit of the achievement of the MDGs in the face of climate change and associated impacts that would mostly affect the poor. The programme supports climate risk management (CRM) through mainstreaming greenhouse gas (GHG) mitigation into national policy and investment frameworks, including increased clean development mechanism (CDM) financing opportunities, and enhancing Egypt’s capacity to adapt to climate change. In this context, this initiative will contribute to reducing poverty, mitigate risk and strengthen governance.
2. UNHCR will provide additional support to refugees and asylum seekers in Egypt that includes registration and refugee status determination, identification of durable solutions, capacity building, livelihood activities, provision of legal assistance to refugees and asylum seekers through implementing partners, youth related activities and identification – together with the Government of Egypt – of practical responses to protection challenges, including protection-sensitive responses to irregular movement.
3. IAEA will support the Government of Egypt to build national capacity in the areas of nuclear power development for electricity generation, industrial applications and human health.
4. WHO will support a “road safety” project (with multi-stakeholder involvement) in six governorates, along with the “tobacco-free” initiative that includes the People’s Assembly, central and local authorities, as well as public/private entities and NGOs.

Section 4 – Estimated Resource Requirements

The estimated total financial resource requirements for the UN's contribution to achieve the planned UNDAF outcomes<sup>12</sup>, amount to 736 million US dollars for the period 2013-2017 (annual budget of 147 million US dollars). These figures are indicative as they include both regular (core) and other resources that need to be mobilized.<sup>13</sup> While considerable efforts will be required by the Government and the UN to mobilize funds, this budget is realistic as it is in line with expenditures reported by UN agencies for 2010 (approximately 153 million US dollars).

<sup>13</sup> UN Agencies use different criteria to identify if resources are from regular (core) or other resources. Some agencies do not have regular resources. Generally, other resources are funds that are not guaranteed and need to be mobilized from a variety of sources, such as UN thematic trust funds, bilateral and multilateral donors, and the Government of Egypt, all of which have been important sources for co-funding.

Section 5 – Implementation and Coordination Arrangements

The Mid-Term Review of the UNDAF 2007 – 2011, as well as the survey on the comparative advantages and capacities of the UN revealed that UNDAF implementation has been hampered by a number of factors including ineffective arrangements for coordination, monitoring and evaluation. As a result of this experience, the management arrangements for the UNDAF 2013-2017 have been strengthened, with special attention to ensuring consistency with the following guidelines and principles:

- The revised CCA/UNDAF guidelines;
- The principles of aid effectiveness, embodied in the Paris Principles and Accra Declaration of Action on Aid Effectiveness, and reflected in the Cairo Agenda for Action, including the importance of alignment and harmonization with national systems;
- The “upstream” nature of much of the UN’s work in Egypt; and,
- The need for a clear division of labour and accountability amongst partners involved in UNDAF implementation and coordination.

The following diagram highlights the key functions and composition of the four teams involved in the UNDAF implementation and coordination arrangements, namely the UNDAF Steering Committee, the UN Country Team, the UNDAF Priority Working Groups (PWGs), and the UN Monitoring and Evaluation (M&E) task force:

- The UNDAF Steering Committee provides overall guidance to the UNCT and the UNDAF PWGs based on an annual work plan<sup>14</sup> and an annual review report prepared by the UNDAF PWGs, with the support of the UN Coordination Office<sup>15</sup>, and reviewed by the UNCT. It discusses the continued relevance of the UNDAF Priority Areas to national priorities, and the progress and challenges with UNDAF implementation. The Steering Committee also assists in mobilizing resources to support UNDAF implementation, particularly for UN joint programmes.

The Steering Committee, which will meet at least once a year, preferably in January, is chaired by a senior Government official and co-chaired by the UN Resident Coordinator. Other members are drawn from ministries central to the UNDAF and from the UN Country Team. In addition, a number of Development Partners (DPs) may participate through observer status.

- The UN Country Team (UNCT) is responsible for managing the implementation of the UNDAF. It guides and oversees the work of the UNDAF Priority Working Groups. The UNCT will have at least two of its monthly meetings dedicated to the implementation of the UNDAF: one of these meetings is to discuss the UNDAF consolidated annual progress report for the previous year and the annual work plan for the coming year, while the other is to discuss the mid-year review. Additional sessions of the UNCT can be dedicated to UNDAF implementation as required.

The UNCT is composed of the Heads of UN agencies serving in Egypt.

- The UNDAF PWGs<sup>16</sup>, with support of the UN Coordination Office, are responsible for preparing an annual work plan and results-oriented annual review report for the five UNDAF priority Programme areas, the details of which are described in more detail in Section 6 “Monitoring and Evaluation.” In addition, they follow-up on the guidance provided by the UNDAF Steering Committee and the UNCT. The PWGs are also expected to keep abreast of socio-economic and other developments within their particular area, bringing important developments to the attention of the UNCT, and helping to forge coordinated UN positions, especially on multi-sectoral issues, where appropriate.

UNDAF PWGs will meet on a regular basis. Each PWG is co-chaired by two UN agencies and composed of senior UN programme staff. Government and other UNDAF stakeholders may also participate in the meetings of the PWGs, as appropriate<sup>17</sup>.

- The M&E Taskforce supports UN planning, monitoring and evaluation, particularly, but not limited to, the UNDAF. It provides technical support to UNDAF PWGs and the UN Country Team in

<sup>14</sup> A very simple template for an annual work plan will be developed. The idea is to have one document (2-3 pages per UNDAF Priority Area) that highlights the main interventions of the UN in that specific priority area for the next year. It should be clear that the agency annual workplans remain the only document for signature with the government.

<sup>15</sup> The UN Coordination Office supports UN inter-agency work, including joint analytical work and the development of joint programmes, monitoring and evaluation, and internal and external communications. As described in this section, the UN RCO provides support to the UNDAF PWGs and chairs the M&E Taskforce. It offers policy advice to the UNCT on coordination issues and acts as interlocutor with the Regional UNDG Team, the UN Development Operations Coordination Office (DOCO), other UN Development Group mechanisms, and units in the UN Secretariat such as UN DPA and UN DESA. It also serves as interlocutor with the Government of Egypt, mainly the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Ministry of International Cooperation, on joint UN initiatives, such as joint programmes. The UN Coordination Office works under the leadership of the UN Resident Coordinator and supports the UN Country Team.

<sup>16</sup> If the UNDAF PWGs deem it necessary to have more detailed planning and reporting at the UNDAF outcome level, they may decide to establish UNDAF Outcome Working Groups (OWGs). In this case, the plans and reports of the OWGs will feed into the annual work plans and reports of the UNDAF PWGs.

<sup>17</sup> UNDAF PWGs may also be represented in other multi-stakeholder coordination forums, such as the Government-led Food Security Policy Advisory Board, the Mutual Accountability Working Groups (currently operating in the health and education sectors), and the thematic working groups of the Development Partners Group.

monitoring and reporting on UNDAF outcomes and results. It assists the UNDAF PWGs to ensure that the UNDAF M&E process is, to the greatest extent possible, consistent and builds on national M&E systems and mechanisms. The taskforce provides normative and technical guidance on planning, monitoring and evaluation processes, following results-based management (RBM) principles that are in line with the corporate guidance and standards set by the United Nations Evaluation Group. The M&E Taskforce will also seek to identify opportunities for joint monitoring and evaluation wherever possible (e.g. for joint programmes and thematic reviews), and provide technical support to these exercises.

The M&E Taskforce is composed of the M&E focal points drawn from each UN Agency. It meets regularly, with meetings chaired by the Head of the UN Coordination Office.

- The UN Communications Group (UNCG) brings the UN system's communications resources and skills under a common umbrella. The UNCG works to strengthen inter-agency cooperation in the field of communications, ensures that messages are consistent, and enhances the media profile of UN activities at the national and/or regional level through jointly-organized activities. The core objectives of a UNCG focus on communicating with staff, stakeholders and the public to strengthen the UN system's public knowledge, support policy advocacy and resource mobilization, and inspire action that promotes development.

The UNDAF 2013-2017 provides the framework for the UNCG to structure the joint UN communication strategy, ensuring that communication and advocacy efforts are supporting the anticipated results of this UNDAF.

The UNCG is composed of the communication focal points from UN Agencies. UNIC chairs the meetings and provides the secretariat, with support from the UN Coordination Office.

Section 6 – Monitoring and Evaluation

The UNDAF will be systematically monitored on the basis of the UNDAF results matrices for the five UNDAF priority programme areas. These matrices consist of a set of performance indicators for each UNDAF outcome with corresponding baselines, targets, and means of verification.

At the beginning of the year, each of the UNDAF Priority Working Groups will prepare annual work plans<sup>18</sup>, highlighting key activities towards the achievement of UNDAF Outcomes in the coming year. A consolidated version of the work plans will then be prepared by the UN Coordination Office. The UNDAF annual work plan and UN agency-specific annual work plans should feed from each other, so in this way, synergies between UN agencies will increase and duplication of activities will be avoided.

The PWGs will monitor UNDAF progress during the year. Towards June, the UNDAF PWGs will discuss progress and challenges with the implementation of the consolidated annual work plan. These discussions will be written up in minutes that will be discussed by the UNCT in its plenary mid-year meeting.

Towards December, the PWGs will prepare short, results-oriented annual review reports<sup>19</sup>. A consolidated version of the UNDAF annual review report that also factors in the results of agency-specific annual reviews will be prepared by the UN Coordination office, with the support of the UN M&E Taskforce. This report will highlight progress, issues requiring the attention of the UNCT and the UNDAF Steering Committee, lessons learned, good practices, and possible challenges in the year ahead, as well as reflecting on the assumptions and risks that underpin the UNDAF.

Towards the beginning of year, the UNDAF Steering Committee will hold an UNDAF Annual Review meeting to review progress on the UNDAF based on the above-noted UNDAF annual review report<sup>20</sup>. It will also review the annual work plan.

To the extent possible, monitoring data will come from national M&E systems and data repositories. This will ensure alignment with national M&E processes, reduce transaction costs, enhance national ownership, and increase mutual accountability for results in the UNDAF Priority Areas.

<sup>18</sup> To facilitate the preparation and consistency of the annual work plan, a template will be prepared by the PWGs with the support of the M&E Taskforce and the UN Coordination office.

<sup>19</sup> To facilitate the preparation and consistency of the annual report, a template will be prepared by the PWGs with the support of the M&E Taskforce and the UN Coordination office.

<sup>20</sup> As part of the UNDAF Annual Review process, the UNDAF results matrices can be reviewed by the UNCT and the Steering Committee and updated, as needed.

UNDAF M&E Calendar

The UNDAF M&E Calendar lists all major activities that support the monitoring of UNDAF Outcomes, including: surveys, research and studies related to the UNDAF; the UNCT’s support to national monitoring systems; planned evaluations and reviews; M&E capacity development initiatives; the use of information resulting from M&E activities; and major M&E activities of the GoE and other partners relevant to the UNDAF. It will be compiled by the UN M&E Taskforce with the support of the UN Coordination Office. The calendar will be prepared at the outset of the UNDAF and updated annually.

Mid-Term Review and Final Evaluation

A final evaluation of the UNDAF will be undertaken in the first quarter of 2017. A Mid-Term Review is projected to take place towards the first quarter of 2015. The Mid-Term Review and the evaluation will assess the relevance, efficiency, effectiveness and sustainability of the UN system’s technical and development assistance to Egypt, and the collective UN system’s contributions to national priorities. These exercises will also provide an opportunity to assess the coherence of the UN system in addressing national priorities, and the strengths and weaknesses of partnerships developed during UNDAF implementation. In addition, these exercises will help to identify key achievements, lessons learned and best practices, as well as the constraints encountered, which will help guide the design of the subsequent UNDAF.

The UNDAF Mid-Term Review and final evaluation will use the UNDAF Annual Review Reports as a basis for their assessments.

Annex 1: Situation Analysis: Key Development Challenges Facing Egypt, 2010

The overall framework for the Situation Analysis report is sustainable development, which is defined as “development that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs.” The framework recognizes three interdependent and mutually reinforcing pillars of sustainable development: economic and social development, and environmental protection. The first pillar covers the production and growth parameters of well-being, the second pillar addresses the socio-political dimension of equity and human rights, and the third pillar ensures the medium and longer term protection of the environment and natural resources.

The links between the three pillars are such that any sector — such as agriculture — appears under all three pillars so that it is influenced by the other pillars, and in turn, feeds into policies and actions in other sectors. Under the first pillar (economic-based), agriculture is a potential engine of growth, with increased productivity, higher value added exports, and more off-farm employment. Under the second pillar (socio-political), poverty reduction in rural communities is emphasized in terms of health, literacy, and family planning, together with increased participation in community affairs. Finally, under the third pillar, challenges are analyzed to ensure the medium and longer-term sustainability of agricultural and water resources, along with protection of the environment and natural resources. Beyond agriculture, the same inter-linkages can be found in all productive sectors (e.g. manufacturing), and service sectors (e.g. tourism).

Pillar I (sustainable and inclusive growth) covers elements of macroeconomic policy for sustainable and inclusive growth, and these depend on an effective competitiveness strategy for production and service sectors, with employment and growth opportunities. Egypt has identified five engines of growth, which are manufacturing industry, tourism, agribusiness, ICT, and the micro, small and medium enterprise (MSME) sector. Another three sectors are construction, housing and renewable energy. A critical element under Pillar I is labour market policies that ensure adequate education and skill formation, increased productivity, and decent job opportunities. The emphasis is on youth employment, especially in the private MSME sector.

Pillar II (socio-political rights) covers elements of human development including policies and programs for poverty alleviation, and access to social services (education, health, family planning) for all segments of the population, with a special focus on children, youth, and women, as well as the handicapped and the elderly. Human development is also concerned with the processes of participation, democratization and good governance. This requires accelerating the on-going process of administrative, political and fiscal decentralization, promoting further reforms towards applying international human rights standards, reforming and implementing a new civil service reform law, and furthering efforts in fighting corruption.

Pillar III (environment and sustainable natural resources) covers all elements of natural resources including agricultural land, water, energy — both depletable energy (petroleum and gas) and the potential for renewable energy (wind, solar) — and their sustainability. The purpose is to analyze the status of the agricultural development strategy and issues of food security, water and irrigation. Pillar III also pays special attention to the impact of growth and development on Egypt’s environment and related sectors, including water, sanitation, health and waste management. The importance of introducing environment-friendly practices such as ecotourism is highlighted. Pillar III is especially concerned with the potential threats of climate change, water and energy scarcity, and the need for adaptation. Finally, issues of long-term sustainability are covered in the areas of urban planning, informal settlements and transport.

35 challenges were identified in the three pillars in addition to 4 cross-cutting challenges, namely capacity building, scaling-up best practices, coordination and connectivity, and access to reliable data.

Annex 2: Summary Matrix of the UNDAF Outcome Statements

Poverty Alleviation through pro-poor growth and equity	Quality Basic Services	Democratic Governance	Food Security and Nutrition	Environment and Natural Resource Management
Outcome 1.1: Government is operating with efficient and adequately resourced mechanisms of awareness creation, equitable targeting, delivering and monitoring of social protection services and access to adequate and affordable housing, for children, young people, rural women, elderly and other vulnerable groups.	Outcome 2.1: Vulnerable mothers and children under 5 have increased access to continuous and integrated primary health care (PHC) services, particularly perinatal care (PC) and nutritional services.	Outcome 3.1: National and local capacities and systems are enhanced for decentralized, inclusive and gender sensitive planning, budgeting, monitoring & evaluation	Outcome 4.1: Relevant institutions/bodies develop and implement evidence based policies and joint sustainable intervention on food security, food safety and nutrition in coordinated manner.	Outcome 5.1: The Government of Egypt has adopted and effectively implemented sound climate change adaptation and disaster risk reduction policies and programmes focused on vulnerable sectors, groups and high risk geographic locations.
Outcome 1.2: Government applies improved pro-poor, inclusive and gender sensitive policies in financial and non-financial services supporting of Micro and Small Enterprises (MSE).	Outcome 2.2: Women, men and young people have increased access to quality FP/RH services.	Outcome 3.2: National institutions and CSOs are strengthened to further promote, protect, respect and fulfil human rights in line with Egypt's international commitments, with a special focus on women, children, disabled persons, refugees, the elderly and migrants.	Outcome 4.2: Food subsidy system delivers good quality food packages and in an efficient manner, to vulnerable and poor families and other targeted high risk populations.	Outcome 5.2: The Government of Egypt, private sector and civil society have complied with multi-lateral environmental agreements, adopted policies, and implemented operational measures towards a green and sustainable economy and society.
Outcome 1.3: Strengthened private sector businesses in tourism, agro-industries, and other key pro-poor sectors are able to address gender, equity and environmental sustainability.	Outcome 2.3: The health system is strengthened to improve the health literacy of vulnerable populations (particularly on proper feeding practices, birth spacing and Family Planning, prevention of Communicable Diseases (CDs) and Non Communicable Diseases (NCDs).	Outcome 3.3: Anticorruption and accountability institutions, legislation and policies are reformed, modernized and transparent to ensure social justice and Rule of Law in line with Egypt's International commitments.	Outcome 4.3: Vulnerable people, especially women and children, consume adequate, healthy and nutritious food	Outcome 5.3: The Government of Egypt and local communities have strengthened mechanisms for sustainable management of, and access to, natural resources such as land, water and ecosystems.
Outcome 1.4: More and better skilled youth, women and other vulnerable groups have decent job opportunities.	Outcome 2.4: Vulnerable populations have improved access to quality prevention, care, support and treatment for Hepatitis C, HIV and TB.	Outcome 3.4: The voice, leadership, civic engagement and political participation of women and young people are visible and effective in public spheres	Outcome 4.4: Efficient food production supply chains, including the adoption of good agricultural practices, are achieved.
	Outcome 2.5: National health system is strengthened for preparedness and response to public health emergencies with special focus on Avian and	Outcome 3.5: Institutions, legislation and policies are responsive to the immediate requirements of the transition to democracy

	Pandemic Influenza in accordance with (International Health Regulations (IHR 2005))
	Outcome 2.6: Children in Egypt aged 4-5 have more access to inclusive quality pre-primary education
	Outcome 2.7: Children in Egypt aged 6 – 14 have more access to, and complete, quality basic education (formal and non-formal) with a special focus on vulnerable groups and gender equality
