1. STATEMENT BY THE MINISTER OF EDUCATION

In 2004 our first decade of freedom was celebrated with a positive sense of confidence.

The education sector has achieved a great deal in ten years of freedom. Thousands of our teachers are now better qualified, proactive school nutrition programmes ensure that young learners do not go hungry at school, our participation rates are comparable to those in industrial countries, more girls than boys participate in secondary school, and girls do better than boys in key competency tests. Early childhood development and Grade R programmes have been significantly expanded, and the backlogs in infrastructure have been aggressively reduced – in fact, the substantial sum of R459 million invested in 1999 rose to R3,5 billion in 2004/5.

This list of achievements could go on indefinitely. In the year 2005 there will be more progress in implementing our programmes for change and development.

The year 2005 is also the year in which we celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the Freedom Charter, which was adopted at the people's congress held in Kliptown in 1955. The Freedom Charter proclaimed that "the doors of learning and culture shall be open to all". This is a commitment that is acutely valid today. In response to the Charter celebrations, we will develop programmes in all our education institutions to commemorate this historic South African achievement.

The second decade of freedom is one in which we must consolidate the gains we have made since 1994. Policy must be directed at improving outcomes, at stimulating innovation and change, at strengthening responsiveness and at addressing those areas of education that have so far received inadequate attention. We now know much more about our needs. Skills development and access to science and technology stand out as key focus areas. Increasingly, our attention is drawn to the need for skills beyond our education institutions. We can no longer neglect the workplace and industry and the other sectors that offer opportunities for work and entrepreneurship.

Ten years of remarkable progress in increasing access and resource provision have created room for greater attention to neglected aspects of the curriculum, such as the arts, music and sport. We have achieved outstanding results in teacher development programmes. Our programme for addressing poor qualification levels has succeeded beyond our wildest expectations.

Ms Naledi Pandor, MP
Minister of Education

In the next five years we will have to build on this record by working to enhance the professional status of teaching. Teachers should be recognised as pivotal to quality education. In fact, quality education will have to be the driving force behind everything we do in this decade.

Quality education means we must have enough classroom space for all our children. We must ensure that our schools have clean water, electricity and sanitation. We cannot allow infrastructural inadequacies to persist for another decade. We must mobilise all our national, provincial and local resources to this end.

The education sector needs to develop a passion for quality education in order to tackle the key challenges that we face.

First, we need to re-imagine and re-invent our public colleges for further education and training. This will mean more than just merging the colleges and their campuses. It will involve the reorientation of administrative, governance, management, teaching and academic support systems, as well as massive investment in teaching and learning resources and equipment, at these colleges.

Second, we will consolidate the achievements made in improving the number of qualified teachers in our system. Furthermore, we will explore the factors contributing to improvements in teacher allocation and utilisation patterns, and will identify best practice at provincial level. This will enable us to improve the allocation of teaching resources, particularly in the key subjects of our new curriculum in schools in our country.

Third, we will strengthen the monitoring and evaluation of learner performance, institutional functionality and system achievement in terms of local, national and global development goals. We will ensure that all projects and programmes are better designed to contribute to the transformation agenda that this Government has set itself.

As a result of emerging priorities, a realignment of planned programmes and interventions has taken place. This means that some interventions indicated in the Strategic Plan 2004 – 2006 have been changed to meet the needs of these emerging priorities. The impact of interventions and any changes to published plans will be more extensively reported in the forthcoming annual report of the Department of Education.

I wish to commend this Strategic Plan for 2005-9 to Parliament and to the people of South Africa. This plan outlines our key areas of focus for the next five years and indicates to all participants in the education enterprise what we will do to ensure that our goals of quality education for all are achieved.

2. LEGISLATIVE MANDATES

Since 1994, a number of policies have been implemented and legislation promulgated to create a framework for transformation in education and training. A summary of key policies and legislation follows:

1. The Constitution of the Republic of South Africa (1996) which requires education to be transformed and democratised in accordance with the values of human dignity, equality, human rights and freedom, non-racism and non-sexism. It guarantees access to basic education for all, with the provision that everyone has the right to basic education, including adult basic education. The fundamental policy framework of the Ministry of Education is stated in the Ministry's first White Paper: Education and Training in a Democratic South Africa: First Steps to Develop a New System (February, 1995). This document adopted as its point of departure the 1994 education policy framework of the African National Congress. After extensive consultation, negotiation and revision, it was approved by Cabinet and has served as a fundamental reference for subsequent policy and legislative development.
2. The National Education Policy Act (NEPA) (1996) was designed to inscribe in law the policies, as well as the legislative and monitoring responsibilities, of the Minister of Education and to formalise the relations between national and provincial authorities. It laid the foundation for the establishment of the Council of Education Ministers (CEM), as well as the Heads of Education Departments Committee (HEDCOM), as inter-governmental forums to collaborate in developing a new education system. As such, it provides for the formulation of national policies in general and further education and training for, inter alia, curriculum, assessment and language policy, as well as quality assurance. NEPA embodies the principle of cooperative governance, elaborated upon in Schedule Three of the Constitution.
3. The South African Schools Act (SASA) (1996) promotes access, quality and democratic governance in the schooling system. It ensures that all learners have right of access to quality education without discrimination, and makes schooling compulsory for children aged 7 to 14. It provides for two types of schools — independent schools and public schools. The provision in the Act for democratic school governance through school governing bodies, is now in place in public schools country-wide. The school funding norms, outlined in SASA, prioritise redress and target poverty with regard to the allocation of funds for the public schooling system.
4. The Further Education and Training Act (1998), Education White Paper 4 on Further Education and Training (1998), and the National Strategy for Further Education and Training (1999-2001). The latter provides the basis for the development of a nationally coordinated further education and training system, comprising the senior secondary component of schooling and Further Education and Training (FET) colleges. It requires the FET institutions, established in terms of the new legislation, to develop institutional plans, while making provision for programme-based funding and a national curriculum for learning and teaching.
5. The Higher Education Act (1997) provides for a unified and nationally planned system of higher education. It furthermore gave the green light for a statutory Council on Higher Education (CHE), which advises the Minister, while being responsible for quality assurance and promotion. The Higher Education Act and Education White Paper 3 on Higher Education (1999) formed the basis for the transformation of the higher education sector via an institutional planning and budgeting framework. This culminated in the National Plan for Higher Education in 2001.

6. A whole spectrum of legislation, including the Employment of Educators Act (1998), to regulate the professional, moral and ethical responsibilities of educators, as well as the competency requirements for teachers. The historically divided teaching force is now governed by one Act of Parliament and one professional council — the South African Council of Educators (SACE).
7. The Adult Basic Education and Training Act (ABET) (2000) provides for the establishment of public and private adult learning centres, funding for ABET, the governance of public centres, as well as quality assurance mechanisms for this sector.
8. The South African Qualifications Authority (SAQA) Act (1995) provides for the establishment of the National Qualifications Framework (NQF), which forms the scaffolding for a national learning system that integrates education and training at all levels. The joint launch of the Human Resources Development Strategy by the Minister of Labour and the Minister of Education on 23 April 2001 reinforces the resolve to establish an integrated education, training and development strategy that will harness the potential of our young and adult learners.
9. Curriculum 2005 (C2005) embodies the vision for general education to move away from a racist, apartheid, rote model of learning and teaching, to a liberating, nation-building and learner-centred outcomes-based initiative. In line with the training strategies, the reformulation is intended to allow greater mobility between different levels and between institutional sites, and to promote the integration of knowledge and skills through learning pathways. Its assessment, qualifications, competency and skills-based framework encourage the development of curriculum models which are aligned to the NQF in theory and practice.
10. The Education White Paper on Early Childhood Development (2000) provides for the expansion and full participation of 5-year-olds in pre-school reception grade education by 2010 as well as for an improvement in the quality of programmes, curricula and teacher development for 0- to 4-year-olds, and 6-to 9-year-olds.
11. Education White Paper 6 on Inclusive Education (2001) describes the intent of the Department of Education to implement inclusive education at all levels in the system by 2020. Such an inclusive system will enable the inclusion of vulnerable learners and reduce the barriers to learning through targeted support structures and mechanisms, which will improve the retention of learners in the education system, particularly those learners who are prone to dropping out.

4. INTRODUCTION

Our vision of an education and training system where all our people will have access to quality life-long education and training derives from Government's aim to ensure that quality education for all is achieved in the forthcoming decade. The year 2005 marks the start of the second decade of freedom. This decade will prove to be one in which many of the challenges experienced in the first decades of freedom will be overcome, in which the human development and transformation goals of our country will be met. The priority areas for action in the education system are presented in the following pages, incorporating existing and emerging strategic priorities, as identified through the Government Programme of Action, the vision of the Minister of Education, and key developments in the education and training sector.

Much has been achieved in recent years, and in different sectors, making Government's vision of a better life for all a reality for thousands in our country. The institutional, legislative and policy reform process started with the advent of the democratic dispensation, has yielded results ranging from the consolidation of fragmented systems, to the evidence of extensive interaction between diverse learners in our education institutions (an outlawed phenomenon in the last decades of our country's history). We have witnessed the improved participation of learners who would otherwise not have been at school, and in tertiary institutions, through innovative developmental policies and legislation such as fee exemptions and the National Students Financial Aid Scheme. There is improved participation in Mathematics, Science and Technology at all levels in the system, and we have transformed the curriculum. New administrative, management and democratic governance systems have been introduced at institutional level in the education system, and we have seen massive gains in improving teacher qualifications. However, some of the achievements that have been made seem dwarfed by the realities of the historical inequities we inherited. As well as these historical challenges facing the education and training system, new and emerging challenges created by the dynamic nature of the world we live in, and the needs of an emerging democratic state, will cause us to require considerable resources to enable the successful reform of the system in the coming years. Successful reform of the system for learners, educators and parents will mean that we will have to take the focus of our interventions to the institutional and even the classroom level. Sustained support will be directed to those institutions which are most in need.

Partnerships will be crucial in the area of skills development, especially for young people and adults requiring basic education and training. Government's social cluster ensures that these challenges are dealt with in an integrated fashion, with the emphasis on better service delivery to the public. As a result, many of the programmes outlined in the strategic plan for the next few years will involve partnerships with other public and private sector entities and agencies as well as non-governmental organizations. Such partnerships will need to assist in the ultimate achievement of our goals, and will be focused on advocacy for our priorities, implementation support for our programmes, and enabling sustainable outcomes for learners in the education system.

Quality education for all

This will be the cornerstone of all developments in education over in the next five years. A particular priority will be on creating better conditions for learning, improving the quality of teaching, the recapitalisation of FET Colleges as a key instrument for skills development, and strengthened monitoring and evaluation in the system. Interventions in these key areas have been consolidated into broad priorities in line with Government's development priorities of dealing with poverty, expanding employment, and human resource development, especially in scarce skills areas. Many of these priority areas are cross-cutting, and include the need for strengthening institutional reform. This relates to attributes which may be tangible (such as equipment and material resources) or intangible (such as an adherence to constitutional values), and these are also highlighted in the various interventions described in the strategic plan.

In ensuring quality education for all, all sectors will be examined so as to consolidate and strengthen achievements, highlight innovations and review and adjust the areas where there are gaps in implementation and provision. The focus in the next five years will be how education serves as a vehicle for achieving social, human and economic equity and development in our country. More attention will be paid to whether the learners and graduates from all sectors in our system exhibit the knowledge, skills and attitudes that are our Constitution and society demands. A sustained effort will be made by the Department of Education to make more children read, to become better in their home language, as well as in English. Multilingualism will be strengthened, and fostering a culture of reading will enable the necessary cognitive skills to be better acquired by learners, which will improve their overall performance in the classroom.

Infrastructure development

The conditions under which learning and teaching takes place in our system occurs is a priority of government. While we never simply equate good resources to educational quality, it is clear that the provision of water, sanitation and adequate infrastructure will improve the performance of learners particularly in rural and poor areas. The elimination of the phenomenon of "learners under trees" is but a start, and the number of learners in unsuitable conditions will be drastically reduced through our interventions in coming years. Transportation, hostels and temporary accommodation will be used in innovative combinations to develop sustainable alternatives to existing challenges in infrastructure development.

Restoring the professional integrity and status of teachers

Teachers are one of the key resources in the education system which hold promise for increased access to quality. Under the banner of "investing in our teachers", five key strategic areas for intervention have been identified for intervention. The first is to rapidly deepen our knowledge of the teaching service, conditions, sources of motivation, and profile. Secondly, we plan to finalise and implement a national framework for initial teacher education and for continuing professional development. Thirdly, we will focus on supplying the critical skills teachers need in their work and in strategic areas, including languages, mathematics, science and technology. Fourthly, we will use the relationship between conditions of employment of teachers, including performance related pay and incentives, to improve on the impact of such measures in the system. Finally, we will develop and implement an accountability system, so as to ensure the attainment of learning outcomes. In all these issues, the Department of Education will lead by deploying its own resources, marshalling external resources, especially within Higher Education institutions, and monitoring implementation at all levels. The role of districts and other levels in facilitating professional development and improving performance will however be crucial in this task.

Skills development through the revitalization of FET Colleges

The third major area of intervention will be in the area of skills development, particularly through the public FET Colleges. Research within and outside the system has begun to point to gaps in our approach to skills development, and it is clear that there are steps we need to take better match the needs of the labour market to the skills developed in our FET Colleges. In the coming years, we will focus on the restructuring and transformation FET Colleges, including a reform and re-alignment of all programmes, to respond to the intermediate skills needs of the country. The FET College system will be differentiated, according to national and provincial priorities, and the programme mix in the colleges will be shifted towards a more responsive model. This has implications for administration, governance, management, and funding in the sector, which will be created as a distinct set of institutions, different from schools in terms of purpose and form, and in their contribution to human development in our country.

Our challenge in the next five years will be to ensure that the targeted increases in participation are meaningful and translate into improved throughput and graduation rates. In addition, we will have to provide appropriate student support systems that will contribute to sustainable skills development, particularly in the scarce skills areas of Mathematics, Science and Technology. The level of effort and urgency with which this intervention is tackled requires a strengthened approach to resourcing and planning for the sector. The Department of Education will lead the systemic development of the FET colleges, with support from Government and the private sector. This intervention will ensure a coherent qualifications framework, and the development of programmes which will bridge those offered by schools and by higher education institutions. In this way, we will secure the future of many young and adult learners who wish to continue with education after completing basic education, and those who wish to continue with adult education and training in a conducive and flexible learning environment.

Adult Basic Education and Training

Literacy levels are of great concern, particularly for young adults who drop out of school. Adult Basic Education and Training (ABET) will therefore receive dedicated attention. This will include the expansion of the current ABET learnerships, particularly for participants on government's Expanded Public Works Programme, and collaboration with other partners involved in ABET provision to increase the number of Public Adult Learning Centres in the country. We will enter into partnerships with other agencies to ensure that on-site literacy and basic education programmes are improved and strengthened in all parts of the country. Where appropriate, ICTs will be utilised to ensure maximum access to ABET and Literacy programmes.

Monitoring and evaluation

The monitoring instruments we have developed over the last ten years include the Education Management Information System (EMIS), Systemic Evaluations at key stages of the system (Grades 3 and 6), as well as the national examinations for matric, FET Colleges, and ABET. In the next period, however, we will continue to assess learning performance, and evaluate the results to determine what needs to be done to improve on learning outcomes. This diagnosis of areas for intervention, and the application of corrective measures to be taken in the classroom, will be the focus of our monitoring and evaluation endeavours in the coming period. For this purpose, our monitoring and evaluation systems will need to be strengthened to ensure that we move the education and training system in a way that contributes to the human resource development goals of our country in a meaningful way.

Strengthening and sharpening current instruments in the system will require incorporating the monitoring and evaluation of values, attitudes and behaviours which contribute to social cohesion, besides the broader development indicators that we are familiar with. A dedicated unit will be established to over-see this programme, and their activities over the next five years will be critical in identifying best practice and replicating it. The co-operative relationship between the spheres of government will be critical in this task, and the current inter-governmental framework and structural arrangements within which education is located should enhance these interventions for the good of our learners, and for the future of our system.

Institutional reform

Another area in which we will strengthen our interventions is in driving the reform and transformation of our education institutions in support of the development agenda of government. This transformation will require changes in management, governance and administration, in the staff and student profile, and in the cultural environment of the institutions. All of these determine whether institutions are able to develop graduates who exhibit high levels of cognitive achievement, and also display the values, behaviours and attitudes envisaged in the Constitution.

The process of Higher Education institutional reform will be completed by 2006. In 2007 we will begin the process of assessing whether the higher education system in its consolidated form and function continue to serve the development needs of the country, and whether the goals of the reform have been achieved. We will continue to monitor graduation and throughput rates, especially in respect of race and gender, as well as student and staff profiles, research output, institutional ethos and culture. We will scrutinise the programme and qualification mix across the country, to ensure appropriate differentiation and curriculum reform. Higher education institutions must contribute to the creation of a new pool of intellectuals in a wide range of fields, as must serve as centres of excellence in our country, and in the region.

Dealing with poverty, and improving social cohesion

Through the social cluster of government we will continue to pursue expanded learning and employment opportunities through Adult Basic Education and Training programmes as well as Early Childhood Development initiatives across the country. Our National School Nutrition Programme will strive to make a difference to the health and nutritional status of children across the country, with fewer structural and operational challenges than in the past. Our model of delivery will support local economic development and poverty alleviation through the participation of women and communities as the providers of nutrition to schools. Interventions in rural education will focus on the broad challenges of education provision under conditions of poverty and need.

The implementation of our values in education interventions will be closely scrutinized to ensure that the impact on learners, and hence on society, is indeed a positive one. History will be used as a resource for building national pride and identity, and curriculum outcomes will be examined to ensure that they contribute to the needs of a unified non-racial, non-sexist society.

International developments in education

Technical advice and leadership of the Department of Education will be more visible and evident in our international relations and interventions. There will be an increasing engagement in regional, continental, international and multi-lateral programmes and interventions in the area of education and human resource development. These will be aligned to the programmes of the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD), so as to build a quality education system for all in our country and our continent. These will include academic exchanges and partnerships in higher education across the continent, among others.

5.1 General Education and Training

GENERAL EDUCATION AND TRAINING: STATEMENT OF PRIORITIES FOR 2005 ONWARDS

The General Education and Training Branch's point of departure is the premise that every organ of the South African Government should aim, at least, to contribute to the broad aims of creating a caring, non-racial, non-sexist and democratic nation, developing the skills base of our country and eradicating poverty among our people. It is in this respect that the Branch has sought to infuse these broad aims in its mission in the next five years.

The Branch will seek to attain the following key strategic objectives in the next five years:

- Consolidating citizens', both children's and adults', access to quality basic education and training;
- effective delivery of viable and relevant outcomes-based learning programmes;
- developing effective systems, structures and human resources for improved delivery, with a particular focus on redress and equity; and
- monitoring and evaluating the delivery of general education and training programmes.

In line with these objectives, the Branch will engage in a number of key programmes in the next five years. Firstly, we will streamline the implementation of the National Curriculum Statement Grades R-9, including a close review of assessment procedures and instruments. Secondly, the Branch will seek to implement a coherent system of teacher education, including initial teacher education and continuing professional development. Thirdly, the continuing professional development of teachers will be focused on the key areas of languages, Mathematics, Science and Technology. Fourthly, we will attack the problem of illiteracy facing both adults and young people in a coherent and accelerated manner. Fifthly, we will take the first steps in the delivery of integrated early childhood development services. Sixthly, the implementation of the initial steps of the White Paper on Special Needs Education will be completed, and the lessons learnt will be incorporated into a new revised plan for the development of an inclusive education system. Seventhly, our contribution to the Expanded Public Works Programme, through Adult Basic Education and Training and Early Childhood Development, will be consolidated. Eighthly, the Branch will strengthen the governance and management capacities of our schools and the Early Childhood Development and Adult Basic Education and Training centres. Finally, we shall seek to develop, improve and consolidate efficient systems of district support to our schools.

5.3 System Planning and Monitoring

SYSTEM PLANNING AND MONITORING: STATEMENT OF PRIORITIES FOR 2005 ONWARDS

The specific functions of the Branch are to analyse, evaluate and monitor the medium- to long-range costing, financing and resourcing of education in South Africa, to produce the analysis reports, models, plans and policies needed for national leadership in this regard, and to manage and support development funding policy for general and further education and training projects sourced from donor and conditional grants. The plans also intend to ensure conditions; policies and support mechanisms are in place for peaceful and harmonious labour relations in the educator corps in South Africa, the provision of legal and legislative support and provision of accurate, reliable and relevant information for decision making in the management of the education system.

Key policy and programmatic thrust of the plans

Over the next period, the following will be the main thrust of programmatic and policy interventions:

- Developing a national Education Management Information System to support the planning and monitoring of the education system as laid down in the National Education Policy Act, Education Information Policy;
- Analysing education expenditure and investment so as to ensure access, equity and redress in regard to funding the provision of education;
- Ensuring peaceful and harmonious labour relations among the education staff in the system, ensuring that timely attention is given to grievances and disputes and improving the conditions of service of these employees;
- Managing and supporting Africa's bilateral and multi-lateral agreements through administering cross-cutting conditional grants for the provincial education departments and cross-cutting donor support funds for the national Department of Education and provincial education departments;
- Planning and monitoring the Education for All programme and the global Millennium Development Goals; and
- Providing planning support and advice regarding the implementation in the education system of various government development programmes, including the following: Integrated Services Strategy of Government, the national Treasury's Infrastructure Development Programme, Growth and Development Summit, the Integrated Sustainable Rural Development Programme and the Urban Renewal Programme as well as the Expanded Public Works Programme.

Mr Firoz Patel
Acting Deputy Director-General:
Planning and Monitoring

Highlights of the plans and strategic levers for achieving the impact required

The following interventions and strategic levers will be used to ensure that planning and monitoring are strengthened in the system:

- Maintenance, development, support, monitoring and evaluation of funding norms and standards will be done for ordinary schools, Adult Basic Education and Training centres, Grade R, Further Education and Training colleges and inclusive education. The impact of these interventions and levers will be the equitable and more efficient allocation of financial resources. All sectors will therefore have proper norms and standards for achieving the fair and progressive allocation of such resources among learners, institutions and provinces so that these institutions and provincial departments can be held accountable. This will ensure that the poorest of learners are given access to quality education.
  - Compliance with funding norms and standards by provinces will be monitored. The actual resource allocation will be monitored to ensure provincial and institutional compliance with the funding principles and policies for improved equity and redress. A compliance report will be published and provinces under study and audit will have to respond to findings and implement recommendations.
  - A comprehensive situation analysis and costing plan will be produced for the education system. This report and plan will be used to determine whether the current level of funding is adequate and, if not, how it can be funded. Inefficiencies and overpricing will be dealt with. There will be more certainty about the medium- to long-term cost of education.
  - Education expenditure will be reviewed and analysed. A report will be published, comparing education expenditure among provinces, programmes and items over time, and provinces will have to justify any gaps and overlaps. This analysis will assist in setting the MTEF funding options and priorities.
- Provinces will improve their budgeting and planning. The report will also assist political office bearers to perform their oversight role. National and provincial treasuries will also find the publication useful for financial planning and monitoring.
- The precise demand for and supply of physical infrastructure for education will be determined and its full provision monitored. A comprehensive register of all facilities will be compiled to ensure sustainable provisioning, and to eliminate incidences of platooning and unsafe learning conditions.
  - An integrated, relevant and reliable education information system will be developed, making accurate, reliable, timely and quality information available for decision making by government. This information will also be used for planning and monitoring the system.
  - South Africa's movement towards the Education for All, the Millennium Development Goals and monitoring of the broad indicators of the education system will be assessed. A report will be produced to assist progress with achieving the goals and also to comply with international reporting requirements.
  - The development of a policy for managing and provisioning donor and conditional grants and for making grant proposals will receive attention, especially in the context of the New Partnership for Africa's Development. Approved policies, procedures, structures and guidelines will be formulated to provide a mechanism for using funding in a developmental way to ensure that partnerships in delivery are optimised.
  - Systems will be developed for tracking and monitoring the provision and conditions of service of educators as well as determining their supply, demand and costs. These will provide support for improving teacher performance in the entire system, particularly in relation to scarce skills subjects such as Mathematics, Science and Technology.
  - A review will be carried out on the role of the Education Labour Relations Council and the mandating process for educator labour relations agreements, in order to improve certainty in the education labour relations context.

REPUBLIC OF SOUTH AFRICA

Quality Education for All

5.4 Quality Promotion and Development

QUALITY PROMOTION AND DEVELOPMENT: STATEMENT OF PRIORITIES FOR 2005 ONWARDS

The Quality Promotion and Development Branch's mandate is threefold:

- To drive quality improvement through ensuring the availability of credible and up-to-date data on the performance of learners and educational institutions;
- to protect the right to quality education and ensure meaningful participation by all children, particularly children at risk; and
- to build social cohesion in the system by ensuring that all education institutions embrace the values enshrined in the Constitution, placing special emphasis on equity and non-racism.

The key thrust of the programmes is a continuous improvement in attainment of learning outcomes by all and bridging the quality divide between previously advantaged and previously marginalised schools or communities.

The key levers to be used to this end are the following:

- Regular assessment of the achievement of specified learning outcomes in critical learning areas at various levels of the system;
- strengthened support for the implementation of the Whole School Evaluation Policy at school and district level;
- the refocusing and broadening of health programmes within education to ensure the overall well-being of both learners and educators;
- policy guidelines for the management and coordination of school sport, arts and culture;
- a resourcing strategy to increase access to and participation in rural and urban nodes in the Integrated Sustainable Rural Development Programme and Urban Renewal Programme;
- the implementation of the recommendations of the Ministerial Committee on Gender Equity to ensure equality and parity in the education system and provide a positive learning experience for girls.

In the next period, the above programmes will work to guarantee access to and the completion of quality education by children at risk as well as raise accountability levels towards quality educational outcomes overall. The focus on the nodes identified in the ISRDP and the URP, as well as the School Feeding Programme which prioritises the feeding of learners at schools in the poorest two quintiles, will ensure the appropriate targeting of resources to secure equity in provisioning. The focus on race, values and gender will support Government's programme towards a just and equitable South African society.

5.5 Higher Education

HIGHER EDUCATION: STATEMENT OF PRIORITIES FOR 2005 ONWARDS

The key function of the Higher Education Branch is to provide strategic direction in the development of an effective and sustainable higher education system and to manage the government's responsibilities for the regulation of the higher education system. The plans are intended to identify the key strategic priorities for the Branch's activities in the mentioned years.

Key policy and programmatic thrust of the plans

The plans are based on the policy goals and objectives outlined in Education White Paper 3: A Programme for the Transformation of Higher Education (1997), and the framework for the implementation of those goals and objectives, which are contained in the National Plan for Higher Education (2001). The plans underpin the commitment of the Ministry to supporting quality improvement, efficiency and effectiveness, as well as equity in the higher education system. In this regard, the specific focus of the plans includes the implementation of the institutional restructuring proposals, the phasing-in of the new funding framework and associated processes in general and the development of an enrolment planning framework in particular, the development of a differentiated system linked to programmes and qualifications, the promotion of research, and the monitoring of equity and transformation goals and indicators.

There has been growing concern in the past period that focused attention should be given to ensuring that the higher education system plays its role, as part of the broader National System of Innovation, in overcoming the challenge of producing a new generation of academics and transforming its social composition. The Higher Education Branch will endeavour to identify ways in which its programmes and initiatives can be more effectively mobilised to address this challenge.

Highlights of the plans

The key strategic objectives of the plans are as follows:

1. To support the production of the high-quality graduates needed for the social and economic development of the country. Particular attention will be given to enrolment planning for the higher education system and the alignment during the period 2005-2009 of student growth with the availability of resources. In this regard a study will be initiated to assess the macro-funding requirements for a sustainable, affordable and quality higher education system, which is responsive to national policy goals and objectives.

Mrs Nasima Badsha
Deputy Director-General: Higher Education

Attention will also be given to the full implementation of the new funding framework, including effecting any changes that may be required as a result of existing weaknesses or gaps. This will include the development of a framework for the allocation of research development funds, which will be undertaken in conjunction with the Department of Science and Technology and the National Research Foundation.

The goal and objectives, including targets and indicators, in the National Plan, which was adopted in 2001, will be assessed and revised as necessary.

The draft of a new qualifications framework for higher education was released in 2004. This will be finalised during 2005 in alignment with the revised NQF framework.

With the introduction in 2006 of the new curriculum for Grades 10-12, the FETC will replace the current senior certificate examination from 2008. In this regard, during the first half of 2005, the new statutory minimum requirements for entry to higher education will be finalised. In the subsequent years, and especially in the context of the rejuvenation of FET colleges, attention will be given to the interface between higher and further education, particularly to promote student mobility.

2. To achieve equity in the South African higher education system. Enrolment and graduation patterns will be monitored, among other things, to assess their impact on the achievement of race and gender equity. The level of participation in higher education by adult learners will also be monitored to assess the system's response to lifelong learning. The impact of institutional culture on the achievement of equity goals will be examined with a view to informing best practice at the institutional level.
3. To achieve diversity in the South African education system. The implementation of the new institutional landscape is in progress. The Branch will monitor the ongoing implementation of the restructuring of institutions and facilitate the achievement of the broader policy objectives informing the restructuring exercise. As part of the ongoing planning processes, academic programmes, particularly at postgraduate level and in high-cost fields, will be identified for possible regional rationalisation. This exercise will be based on the current "programme and qualification mix" of institutions, which provides a comprehensive audit of the existing programme offerings at all levels of higher education. In view of the reshaping of the landscape of the higher education system, attention will also be given to ensuring institutional diversity through, for example, programme differentiation. Continued attention will be given to supporting the governance capacity in higher education through the development of a framework for student governance and an evaluation of the role of institutional forums.

4. To promote and sustain research in the higher education system. The focus will be on the implementation and monitoring of the new policy for the measurement and reward of published research output. The measurement of and reward for research output in the performing and creative arts will also be reviewed. In addition, the particular role of universities of technology in research and development will be assessed, with a view to enhancing innovation in these institutions.

5. To promote and support a leadership role for South Africa in responding to the African Renaissance and Nepad. A national conference will be convened on African studies in order to provide a platform for debate among scholars from South Africa and the rest of the continent. The Higher Education Branch will also engage with the sector in order to support curriculum development initiatives, and in particular those that seek to address the curriculum and its links to identity and values.

The proposed interventions and activities to achieve each of the strategic objectives outlined above, as well as performance indicators and time frames, are contained in the detailed plans.
